J. L. BOYES,

ODESSA.

MR. EDITOR.

Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to reply to the Odessa correspondent in the Beaver in reference to some remarks made in one of the recent issues.

I cannot hardly understand the motive, neither can I understand why any person in this refined and intellectual age would stoop so low as to send so much slang to any paper to be put in print. It certainly goes to show that their early training must have been very faulty as they place themselves on a par with the rag-tag's of the slums.

If the correspondent had dealt more particularly with pig-stys near their own door it would have been more like business. The correspondent evidently did not realize in their younger days the pleasure that comes from having young men in attendance at Church doors to escort the fairer sex home.

Again the correspondent has gone so far as to advertise through a village correspondence thus robbing the Editor of his just dues and interfering with other people's business to which the term busy-body is applied. If the correspondent had of been in regular attendance at Church and paid attention to what the minister was preaching about they would not have had any time to see what other people were doing. Now I have been talking with the Sexton and he admits he would like some help, but he wants applications from smart energetic young people. No old blisters need apply.

Walsh at John Watt's; Elmer Shangraw and Miss French, of Pennsylvania, at Henry Walker's, also Miss Brooks, of Cleveland; Archibald Osborne, of Watertown, N. Y., at Mrs. H. Montgomery's.

Ernest Smith had his arm broken. Misses Peterson and Ghent, of Kingston, gave Yarker a call. The people are glad to see Miss Ghent restored to health again as it was here she was taken with pneumonia and after her recovery she suffered a relapse and was sent to the Kingston general hospital. Hers was a hopeless case as far as human help was concerned and the people here firmly believe it was a clear case of divine healing.

D. Goudy, Samuel Barker, Stanley Freeman, J. Lovelace, William Ashley, William Cole and W. Fleming leave here next Monday for the west.

In country villages on the line of railway, when you hear the explosion of torpedoes you may know that a wedding party is leaving the station. Well, Thursday afternoon the people heard torpedoes go off and said there goes a wedding party, and to the surprise of all it was learned that the bride was one of Yarker's popular young ladies who was leaving. A young man named Harry Stirk, of Grenna, Man., came here and took Miss Florence Waegant as his wife to his far-off western home. They were married by Rev Mr. Batstone at the home of the bride's mother and Yarkerites all wish them success and happiness.

MAYOR'S LETTER.

Napanee, Aug. 20th, 1908.

A few days ago I was waited upon by a deputation from the citizens of Napanee with reference to the Scarlet fever which has existed in our town for a few months past. I have given the matter my personal attention, and after due investigation I find there are only sixteen homes in which the disease has existed, and which have come to the notice of The Board of Health, and none of the cases have proved fatal or very serious; that there have been no new cases reported since August 1st and that every precaution in reason has been taken to stamp out the disease. As the schools will re-open in a short time, I would request that the children of the homes where scarlet fever has existed absent themselves from school and other congregations until such time as their physician pronounces it perfectly safe for them to mingle with the public.

HERMAN MENG,
Mayor.

A LETTER FROM THE WEST.

TO THE EXPRESS OF NAPANEE.
Dear Editor,

I thought I would drop you a few lines in regard to the prospects of the West. I left Toronto on August 3rd for a visit out to Saskatchewan. We left Toronto at about 3 p. m. 14th August, and after getting out of Toronto into the open country the farm lands looked fine, after we left Alliston. The harvest was well over, threshing was in progress. The land is rolling and of good quality, we reached Dartmouth Station at 7 p. m. The country, before you come to this station, is wild and rocky, abounding with a great many rivers with shrubs of spruce and balsam, no large timber. Passing Italia station in the Muskoka region, a fine summer resort, there is a beautiful lake, the shores all dotted with cottages, a great place for tourists. We arrived at Muskoka station at 7.30. Our next place is Bisco, 475 miles from Port Arthur. Our engine is disabled which causes a delay of several hours. We are now in a desolate region of rivers, lakes, swamps and low shrubbery. Chapleau station was reached at 11.30 on 5th August, 15 minutes for refreshment at this station. We arrive at Desert station at 3 p. m. and pass Banner station at 6 p. m. Indians and wigwags all around here and we reached Lake Superior at 7.30 p. m. The scenery is fine, mountains of rock with deep gorges. We enter several small tunnels. The shore around this part of the lake is dotted with small islands with small shrubbery, no trees. Coming to Jack fish station at 8.15 and not yet dark. At 9.15 arrive at Scriber just getting dark, arrive at Diamond station at 9.20 and see the first sign of tiling since we left Chapleau. This is certainly a God forsaken country, not even a wild fowl. We pass Brule station 233 miles from Winnipeg. At 5.30 arrive at Winnipeg, a beautiful city, the streets are clean and well paved and will compare well with our Eastern cities. At 6.30 we take the Canadian northern for Battleford, this is a well equipped line, good cars with commodious seats and sleeper and dining car. The stations along this line are very thick, from 8 to 15 miles apart mostly good commodious stations, and most of the villages are looking prosperous. We dropped off

NEWS NOTES.

The directors of the agricultural fair at Picton are arranging for a base ball club to play a first-class Prince Edward county team on one of the days of the exhibition.

After an illness extending over a year and a half, Thos. Donnelly, Kingston, marine expert, died at his home University avenue, on Monday, August 24th. He was aged fifty-two years.

Two New York theatre managers have staged a drama, the title of which is The Devil. The play is a success, and now all New York is going to The Devil even faster than ever before.

A despatch from Picton says the lifeless body of Edward Smith, blacksmith, of Chisholm, was found Sunday morning hanging from the limb of a maple tree outside of his home. An examination was made of the remains, and from the condition of the body it is believed the man left his home about one o'clock in the morning and went out and hanged himself. No reason can be assigned for his taking his life. He was in his 60th year and is survived by his widow and three children. An inquest was deemed unnecessary.

It is stated in Bay of Quinte steamboat circles that Captain Roys of the steamer Aletha intends to build an up-to-date steel steamer next winter for passenger traffic on the Bay of Quinte, Lake Ontario and St. Lawrence waters. The new steamer will have a speed of about fifteen miles an hour, and a capacity for carrying five hundred passengers. It is estimated that the cost will be about $300,000. This steamer will not be confined to the bay and river trade, but will likely cater to the citizens of Cobourg, Port Hope, Toronto, St. Catharines, Oswego, Rochester and other points on Lake Ontario.

An effort is being made to extend the market for Canadian products by putting early Canadian apples on the British market for the first time. Cold storage space has been secured on three steamers, the first of which sails from Montreal on Saturday next. The Dominion government induced the steamers to open their cold storage facilities this early by undertaking to pay for all of the space which was not taken. It is understood that the fruit men have come to the front with such large consignments that the government will have to pay little or nothing. If the fruit arrives in good condition and meets with favor in England it will mean the extension of the apple shipping season by from four to six weeks.

Good pickles and catsup are made with good spices and vinegar. We have them at The Medical Hall Fred L. Hooper.

ARRESTED IN WATERTOWN.

On Tuesday last the vault of the Bay of Quinte station at Strathcona was found locked and the key missing, also the station agent, Edward Randall, an Englishman with a wooden leg. Later in the week Chief of Police Graham received word to go to Watertown and bring back the station agent, who was being held in that city pending his arrival. Randall while in Watertown went to Mr. Solomon's store and purchased a suit of clothes in payment of which he gave an express order and received some change back. Then he and will compare well with our Eastern cities. At 6.30 we take the Canadian northern for Battledore, this is a well equipped line, good cars with commodious seats and sleeper and dining car. The stations along this line are very thick, from 8 to 15 miles apart mostly good commodious stations, and most of the villages are looking prosperous. We dropped off at Fielding, where my son-in-law, Mr. W. Shire, has his homestead. He has 44 acres in wheat, a fine crop and measures on an average of 4 feet in height and stands very thick. The harvest is on in full blast here, wherever you look you can see fields of 10 to 50 acres of ripe waving grain. I helped out one piece of 13 1/2 acres and it had 200 shocks of 3000 sheaves, which is a great yield. This week will see the majority of the wheat out. The crop is 30 days earlier this year than last and saved from frost. This is no doubt the country for any young man or farmer with a few sons, who wish to push on for there is great opportunity to get along here for a man of energy and strength. Sure he will not have luxuries or picnics or entertainment, but with frugality and thrift he will soon amass a competency. The land is easy to work after it is once broken and the soil is mostly of a deep black loam with clay sub soil. There are parts where there are some round stone hard heads, but mostly easy to get out of the ground and after the first taking off that is the end of them, not like our eastern lands. The atmosphere is fine, in fact at this time of year most delightful. The outfit for a man taking up a homestead would be 3 good horses, implements for work and cooking outfit, that is the main supply. Horses are hard to get here, that is good heavy horses.

Yours truly,
C. G. COXALL.

in the week Chief of Police Graham received word to go to Watertown and bring back the station agent, who was being held in that city pending his arrival. Randall while in Watertown went to Mr. Solomon's store and purchased a suit of clothes in payment of which he gave an express order and received some change back. Then he went away and Mr. Solomon deposited the order in the bank. Randall went to the Salvation Army headquarters and upon thinking the matter over was filled with remorse, and confessed to the commander of the army. The police were notified and Randall gave himself up and also returned the suit of clothes to Mr. Solomon, settling the transaction with him and telling him of the bogus money order. When searched at the police station a pay envelope marked for C. E. Lake for $27.65, which Randall claims was given to him to give to Lake, was found on his person and also a book of blank orders of the Dominion Express company. Several others in the book had been filled out, the stubs remaining, showing to whom they were made and for what amounts. These were not in Randall's handwriting and it is not supposed that he filled out more than one, the last one for which the stub was blank. Randall appeared before Police Magistrate Rankin on Saturday and was sentenced to six months in gaol for stealing the money and six months for stealing the Express money order book, sentences to run concurrently. When asked if he had anything to say he asked for a long sentence, so that he would be out of the way for some time.

NINETY DEATHS
Bear Silent Witness to the Ravages of Kidney Disease.

An alarming fact—but statistics show that in post mortem examinations as to death from all causes, that in over 90 per cent. of such cases kidney disease is present. This almost incredible statement is borne out by years of comparison by most eminent medical men. A warning to humanity that the percentage of those not cured with kidney taint is very small. South American Kidney Cure relieves in six hours—is nature's preventive—clears the clogged parts—heals—and permanently cures. (8)

A House of Mystery

OR, THE GIRL IN BLUE

CHAPTER XXI.—(Cont'd.)

I think I should have grown confidential towards Gedge were it not that he apparently treated me as one whose mind was wandering. He believed, and perhaps justly so, that my brain had been injured by the accidental blow. To him, of course, it seemed impossible that I, his master, should know nothing of my own affairs. The ludicrousness of the situation was to me entirely apparent, yet what could I do to avert it!

By careful questions I endeavored to obtain from him some facts regarding my past.

"You told me," I said, "that I have many friends. Among them are there any persons named Anson?"

"Anson?" he repeated reflectively. "No, I've never heard the name."

"Or Hickman?"

He shook his head.

"I lived once in Essex Street, Strand," I said. "Have I been to those chambers during the time—the five years you have been in my service?"

"Never, to my knowledge."

"Have I ever visited a house, The Boltons, in Kensington?"

"I think not," he responded.

"Curious! Very curious!" I observed, thinking deeply of the graceful, dark-eyed Mabel whom I had loved six years before, and who was now lost to me for ever.

"Among my friends is there a man named Doyle?" I inquired, after a pause.

"Doyle? Do you mean Mr. Richard Doyle the war correspondent?"

"Certainly," I cried excitedly.

"Is he back?"

"He is one of your friends, and has often visited here," Gedge replied.

"What is his address? I'll wire to him at once."

"He's in Egypt. He left London last March, and has not yet returned."

I drew a long breath. Dick had evidently recovered from fever in India, and was still my best friend, although I had no knowledge of it.

What, I wondered, had been my actions in those six years of unconsciousness? Mine were indeed strange thoughts at that moment. Of all that had been told me I was unable to account for anything. I stood stunned, confounded, petrified.

For knowledge of what had transpired during those intervening years, or of my own career and actions during that period I had to rely upon the statements of others. My mind during all that time, it appeared, had been a perfect blank, incapable of receiving any impression whatsoever.

Nevertheless, when I came to consider how I had in so marvelous a manner established a repuhad lived and enjoyed a world exactly opposite to my own—the world of sordid money-making and the glaring display of riches. I had, in a word, aped the gentleman.

There was a small circular mirror in the library, and before it I stood, marking every line upon my face, the incredible impress of forgotten years.

"It is amazing, incredible!" I cried, heartsick with desire to penetrate the veil of mystery that enshrouded that long period of unconsciousness. "All that you have told me, Gedge, is absolutely beyond belief. There must be some mistake. It is impossible that six years can have passed without my knowledge."

"I think," he said, "that, after all, Britten's advice should be followed. You are evidently not yourself to-day, and rest will probably restore your mental power to its proper calibre."

"Bah!" I shouted angrily. "You still believe I'm mad. I tell you I'm not. I'll prove to you that I'm not."

"Well," he remarked quite calmly, "no sane man could be utterly ignorant of his own life. It doesn't stand to reason that he could."

"I tell you I'm quite as sane as you are," I cried. "Yet I've been utterly unconscious these six whole years."

"Nobody will believe you."

"But I swear it to be true," I protested. "Since the moment when consciousness left me in that house in Chelsea I have been as one dead."

He laughed incredulously. The slightly confidential tone in which I had spoken had apparently induced him to treat me with indifference. This aroused my wrath. I was in no mood to argue whether or not I was responsible for my actions.

"A man surely can't be unconscious, while at the same time he transacts business and lives as gaily as you live," he laughed.

"Then you impute that all I've said is untrue, and is due merely to the fact that I'm a trifle demented, eh?"

"Britten has said that you are suffering from a fit of temporary derangement, and that you will recover after perfect rest."

"Then, by taking me around this house, showing me those books, and explaining all to me you've merely been humoring me as you would a harmless lunatic!" I cried furiously. "You don't believe what I say, that I'm perfectly in my right mind, therefore leave me. I have no further use for your presence, and prefer to be alone," I added harshly.

"Very well," he answered, rather piqued; "if you wish I'll, of course, go."

"Yes, go; and don't return till I send for you. Understand that!

and there I rested, in full uninterrupted view of the open sea. Deep below was a cove—Littleham Cove, it proved to be—and there, under shelter of the cliffs, a couple of yachts were riding gaily at anchor, while far away upon the clear horizon a dark smoke-trail showed the track of a steamer outward bound.

BROKEN IN HEALTH.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Restored Strength After Medical Treatment Had Failed.

"I can truthfully say Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me what one of the best doctors in Halifax failed to do—restored my health." This strong statement is made by Mr. Wm. J. Weaver, 172 Argyle street, Halifax. Mr. Weaver adds: "A few years ago I took employment in a large factory as fireman. I knew the work would be hard, and friends told me I would never stand it, but as I was a strong man, weighing 180 pounds, I laughed at the idea of not being able to do the work. Anyhow I started and found the job a hard one indeed. There were a number of firemen employed and men were taking and quitting the job every few days. I kept at the work for two years and during that time lost 50 pounds weight, and was a broken down man. I could not take my meals and often took my dinner back home with me without touching it. When I would be working on the night shift I could not sleep in the day time, and this added to my trouble. Finally I became a total wreck and had to quit the work. I could hardly drag myself about, and yet had become so nervous that I could not sit still and would walk about the house until I was ready to drop. The doctor came to see me every day, and changed the medicine time and again, but it did me no good. Finally he wanted me to go to the hospital, and at this stage a friend came to stay with me overnight. While he was reading the evening paper he came across the testimonial of a cure wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He said, 'why don't you try them, nothing else is helping you and they may do you good.' He went out and got me a box at once. When this was done I got a half dozen boxes, and before they were all gone I began to feel like a new man. I continued using the pills for a couple of months when I was again as well and as strong as ever I had been in my life, and I have not seen a sick day since. I feel confident there is no remedy in the world equal to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for building up a broken down and nervous system, and for such trouble I would strongly recommend them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pill cure such cases as Mr. Weaver's because they make the rich, red blood that feeds the starved nerves and tones and strengthens every part of the body. That is why they cure anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, paralysis and other troubles due to bad blood and shattered nerves. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EMPRESS WAS HBROINE.

Dowager Empress of Russia Twice Saved Husband's Life.

The reported discovery of the Czarina of a "Terrorist death sentence" lying on the bed of her sleeping son recalls two similarly tragic episodes in the life of her mother-in-law, the Dowager Empress. On one occasion she found on her husband's dressing-table a curious and unfamiliar jewel case, and, on picking it up to examine it more closely, was both surprised and alarmed at its weight. Hurrying with it to her own room, she plunged it into a basin of water, and summoned the Prefect of Police, who pronounced the innocent-looking jewel case a bomb of a particularly deadly type. On another occasion, on entering Alexander's study, the Czarina fancied she heard a slight rustling sound behind the window curtains. With a rare presence of mind she took her husband away under pretext of bidding his children "good-night" in the nursery. On leaving the room she locked the door and gave the key to a party of soldiers, who on entering and examining the study, made the startling discovery that some one had made his escape through the window.

MUST BE DONE TO DEATH.

"I want a good revolver," began the determined-looking man, "six chambers!"

"Why—er—you'd better make it a nine chamber; I want to use it on a cat next door."

Hard and soft corns cannot withstand Holloway's Corn Cure; it is effectual every time. Get a bottle at once and be happy.

"Has my boy been a little defender, and been kind to dumb animals to-day?" "Yes, grandma. I let your canary out of the cage, and when my cat caught it, I set Towser on her."

Lingering, stubborn old sores are erased from the skin by Weaver's Cerate. The good work of blood-cleansing is completed with Weaver's Syrup.

CAUSE.

Paw—"Yes, my son, of course."

Young Son—"Well, then, how does it come to be soft water?"

Paw—"You go on t' bed."

A Soothing Oil.—To throw oil upon the troubled waters means to subdue to calmness the most boisterous sea. To apply Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil to the troubled body when it is racked with pain means speedy subjugation of the most refractory elements. It cures pain, heals bruises, takes the fire from burns, and as a general household medicine is useful in many ailments. It is worth much.

The Elder Matron—"You shouldn't mind the baby crying a little. It strengthens his lungs." The Younger Matron—"Oh, no doubt; but it weakens his father's religion so."

Tea come and go, but the tea that always stays, always leads, always absolutely pure, always the best in quality is "Salada."

tions during that period I had to rely upon the statements of others. My mind during all that time, it appeared, had been a perfect blank, incapable of receiving any impression whatsoever.

Nevertheless, when I came to consider how I had in so marvelous a manner established a reputation in the City, and had amassed the sum now lying at my bankers', I reflected that I could not have accomplished that without the exercise of considerable tact and mental capacity. I must, after all, have retained shrewd senses, but they had evidently been those of my other self—the self who had lived and moved as husband of that woman who called herself Mrs. Heaton.

"Tell me," I said, addressing Gedge again, "has my married life been a happy one?"

He looked at me inquiringly.

"Tell me the truth," I urged.

"Don't conceal anything from me, for I intend to get at the bottom of this mystery."

"Well," he said, with considerable hesitation, "scarcely what one might call happy, I think."

"Ah, I understand," I said. "I know from your tone that you sympathize with me, Gedge."

He nodded without replying. Strange that I had never known this man until an hour ago, and yet I had grown so confidential with him. He seemed to be the only person who could present to me the plain truth.

Those six lost years were utterly puzzling. I was as one returned from the grave to find his world vanished, and all things changed.

I tried to reflect, to see some ray of light through the darkness of that lost period, but to me it seemed utterly inexistent. Those years, if I had really lived them, had melted away and left no trace behind. The events of my life prior to that eventful night when I had dined at The Boltons had no affinity to those of the present. I had ceased to be my old self, and by some inexplicable transition, mysterious and unheard of, I had, while retaining my name, become an entirely different man.

Six precious years of golden youth had vanished in a single night. All my ideals, all my love, all my hope, nay, my very personality, had been swept away and effaced for ever.

"Have I often visited Heaton—my own place?" I inquired, turning suddenly to Gedge.

"Not since your marriage, I believe," he answered. "You have always entertained some curious dislike towards the place. I went up there once to transact some business with your agent, and thought it a nice, charming old house."

"Aye, and so it is," I sighed, remembering the youthful days I had spent there long ago. All the year round was sunshine then, with the most ravishing snow-drifts in winter, and ice that sparkled in the sun so brilliantly that it seemed almost as jolly and frolicsome as the sunniest of sunlit streams, dancing and shimmering over the pebbles all through the cloudless summer. Did it ever rain in those old days long ago? Why, yes; and what splendid times I used to have on those occasions—coffee-making in the schoolroom, or watching old Dixon, the gamekeeper, cutting gunwads in the harness-room.

And I had entertained a marked dislike to the place! All my tastes and ideas during those blank years had apparently become inverted. I mind, therefore leave me. I have no further use for your presence, and prefer to be alone," I added harshly.

"Very well," he answered, rather piqued; "if you wish I'll, of course, go."

"Yes, go; and don't return till I send for you. Understand that! I'm in no humor to be fooled, or told that I'm a lunatic."

He shrugged his shoulders, and muttering some words I did not catch, turned and left the library.

CHAPTER XXII.

He is a faint-hearted creature indeed who, while struggling along some dark lane of life, cannot, at least intermittently, extract some comfort to himself from the thought that the turn must come at last—the turn which, presumably, will bring him out upon the well-made and high-road of happy contentment.

I do not know that I was exactly faint-hearted. The mystery of all had so stunned me that I felt myself utterly incapable of believing anything. The whole thing seemed shadowy and unreal.

And yet the facts remained that I was still alive, standing there in that comfortable room, in possession of all my faculties, both mental and physical, an entirely different person to my old self, with six years of my past lost and unaccountable.

Beyond the lawn the shadow of the great trees looked cool and inviting, therefore I went forth, wandering heedlessly across the spacious park, my mind full of thoughts of that fateful night when I had fallen among that strange company and of Mabel, the woman I had loved so fondly and devotedly.

Sweet were the recollections that came back to me. How charming she had seemed to me as we had lingered hand-in-hand on our walks across the Park and Kensington Gardens, how soft and musical her voice, how full of tenderness her bright dark eyes! How idyllic was our love! She had surely read my undeclared passion. She had known the great secret in my heart.

Nevertheless, all had changed. In a woman's life half a dozen years is a long time, for she may develop from girl to matron in that space. The worst aspect of the affair presented itself to me. I had, in all probability, left her without uttering a word of farewell, and she—on her part—had, no doubt, accepted some other suitor. What more natural, indeed, than she should have married?

That thought held me rigid.

Again, as I strolled on beneath the rustling elms which led straight away in a wide old avenue towards where a distant village church stood, a prominent figure in the landscape, there recurred to me vivid recollections of that last night of my old self—of the astounding discovery I had made in the drawing-room at The Boltons.

How was I to account for that. I paused and glanced around upon the view. All was quiet and peaceful there in the mid-day sunlight. Behind me stood the great white facade of Denbury; before a little to the right, lay a small village with its white cottages; the village of Littleham, I afterwards discovered—and to the left white cliffs and the blue stretch of the English Channel gleamed through the greenery.

From the avenue I turned and wandered down a by-path to a stile,

JOHN WANLESS AND CO'S CLEARANCE SALE.

The news about the sale of John Wanless and Co.'s store to A. E. Rea, receives indisputable confirmation by the advertisement which Wanless and Co. have on another page of this paper.

John Wanless and Co. are known throughout the continent as one of the largest jewelry firms in America. They have been in business in this city over 68 years, the firm having been established in 1840. From the very beginning they made their motto "Quality First," a genuinely real business maxim. Merely to mention that a clock, a watch, a ring, or any piece of jewelry, art bronze, or cut glass came from John Wanless and Co. was to stamp it at once as absolutely of superior quality.

Now that their property has passed from their ownership, and another firm will conduct a new business on the premises, John Wanless and Co. must be out of the building in less than three months. Hence, they have begun an immense rush clearance sale of all goods in stock, including jewelry and diamonds, watches and clocks, cut glass, art bronzes, table silver and fancy umbrellas, and leather goods.

The features of the sale are that the stock is very large, the quality the very best in Canada, and on account of the shortness of the time left in which every article in the store must be sold, the prices are so reduced as to effect a complete clearance within the allotted time. In fact, no opportunity of the kind has ever before come the way of buyers who want the best quality at the minimum of price. This sale affords the chance of a lifetime.

WAR LOSSES FROM DISEASE.

In a recent campaign of the French in Madagascar 14,000 men were sent to the front, of whom 29 were killed in action, and over 7,000 perished from preventable disease. In the Boer war the English losses were ten times greater from disease than from bullets.

AS LIFE PASSES.

A little more grey in the lessening hair

Each day as the years go by;

A little more stooping in the form,

A little more dim in the eye.

A little more faltering of the step

As we tread life's pathway o'er,

And a little nearer every day

To the ones who have gone before.

A little more halting of the gait,

And a dullness of the ear;

A growing weariness of the frame

With each swift passing year.

A fading of hopes and ambitions,

too,

A faltering in life's quest,

And a little nearer every day

To a sweet and peaceful rest.

A little more loneliness in life,

As the dear ones pass away;

A bigger claim on the heavenly land

With every passing day.

A little farther from toil and care,

A little less way to roam;

A drawing near to a joyful hope,

And a happy welcome home.

FORTUNES IN APPLE GROWING

Tasmania is Described as the Fruit-Growers' Paradise.

Thousands to-day are making fortunes in the cultivation of the apple in far-away Tasmania.

The island may well be described as the fruit-growers' paradise. An expert agriculturist with a ten-acre orchard can not only make a good income in a healthy occupation amid ideal surroundings, but find at the end of the season a very substantial balance at his bank.

It is in the Huon district, so named from the river of that name which flows through it, where the finest apple orchards are to be found. Curiously enough, it is very rare to find one man owning an orchard more than fifty or sixty acres in extent. The majority of them range from fifteen to thirty acres, while a ten-acre orchard is regarded as ample size, and five or six acres of good orchard land is considered quite enough to keep a family in comfort.

There are two orchards owned by two Scotsmen. They went out some few years ago, purchased the land at the modest sum of $2.50 per acre from the Government, cleared it, and planted apple trees upon it.

Last year both of them netted over $7,500 apiece, entirely out of the sale of apples. Many a man, if he manages his ten acres of land properly, can make $2,500 or $3,000 profit at the end of the season. Some men are now making as much as $5,000 a year from their ten-acre patches.

The result is that some 10,000 people in the island are now growing apples, yet they cannot supply the demand. The sawmills in the colony could not turn out enough boxes last season to pack all the apples that were grown. The principal reason why the colonists are making nice little fortunes out of their apples is because the fruit has now captured the British markets. It required twenty-seven large steamers to carry the quantity taken by Great Britain last season. The value of the industry to the colony is not less than $1,250,000.

It doesn't pay to borrow trouble even on a friend's account.

FIRE IN THE MAYPOLE MINE

Seventy Miners Entombed at Wigan, England.

A despatch from Wigan, England, says: The worst fears have been realized in the explosion which occurred in the Maypole mine on Tuesday. The entombed miners number about seventy, and it is impossible that any of them can have survived. Efforts at rescue, however, continue unceasingly. Thirty bodies were discovered on Wednesday in the workings, but the fumes from the burning coal prevented the rescuing party from reaching the others that undoubtedly are lying down in the mine. A few bodies were brought to the surface, but all were so blackened and mutilated that identification was impossible.

It will be impossible to make a thorough examination of the working until the fire has been subdued and the air purified. When the first rescue party descended on Wednesday morning the sight that met their eyes was horrifying. Not far from the bottom of the shaft eighteen bodies were found, all frightfully mutilated, legs and arms being blown off, and heads battered almost beyond recognition.

The management of the mine declares that between 60 and 70 men were under ground at the time of the explosion, and that there is no hope that anyone will be brought out alive. The women and children, however, who remained at the pit head all night refused to leave until the bodies of the dead are brought to the surface. Nothing else will convince them of the hopelessness of waiting.

A despatch from Owen Sound says: The inhabitants of Owen Sound are greatly excited over the results of the trials, on Saturday, of the hotelkeepers charged with breaches of the liquor license act. In all there were seventeen charges, implicating nine hotels. The interest of the public has been intensified by the fact that three of the accused who were found guilty were sentenced to four months' im-

HEALTH

"ARTHRITIS DEFORMANS."

This is the name of a chronic disease of the joints, which is more frequent in women than in men, and generally declares itself between the ages of thirty-five and fifty-five.

It was at one time supposed to be closely related to rheumatism or gout, but this belief is no longer held, although the disease is perhaps more likely to overtake people with a family history of gout. It is pretty generally conceded to be of nervous origin, and its symptoms are undoubtedly increased by anything which tends to lower the general health, such as exposure, damp dwellings, poor hygienic surroundings, improper diet, and especially worry and exhaustion.

The chronic form of arthritis deformans, which is the form under consideration at present, is most insidious in its beginnings, often attacking one joint only, but gradually spreading to nearly every joint in the body.

One peculiar characteristic of this complaint is the symmetrical way in which it makes its attacks. If, for example, the middle finger of one hand is the first to suffer, the middle finger of the other hand will come next. Each joint as it is attacked becomes the seat of much pain, tenderness on pressure, and swelling, and there is likely to be more or less rise of temperature.

The progress of the disease is not steady, there being long seasons of apparent cessation when, although the point deformity persists, all the other symptoms cease. These periods of relief may last for weeks or months, and have been known to last for years.

Although arthritis deformans is recognized as an incurable disorder, it does not directly threaten life itself, and many sufferers from it live to extreme old age. The mischief done to the joints during the acute stage, in the form of swelling, muscular contractions and atrophy, is in direct ratio to the length of the attack, and treatment therefore becomes of great importance.

The inflamed joints should be kept at rest. Such exercise as they receive should be with the direct purpose of preventing contractions and deformities, and should take the form of gentle and skilful massage, when it can be borne. Great restriction of diet is unwise, as patients suffering from this disease are already below par, and need every advantage of nutrition. The patients do best in a warm, dry climate, and in good weather should be outdoors as much as possible.

Treatment by baths helps some cases, but that is a matter for the physician to determine. In home treatment, relief of pain may be gained by hot fomentations of the immersion of the joint in water as hot as can be borne.—Youth's Companion.

SAW HUSBAND BURNING.

His Invalid Wife Was Unable to Give Aid.

A despatch from Brockville says: Wm. McKay, an elderly resident, was lighting his pipe near a window on Sunday when a sudden gust of wind blew a curtain against the match. In an instant the curtains and his clothing caught fire. Charles Place, a visitor from Hamilton, was passing the house at the time, and hearing the screams ran in and smothered the flames with a blanket. His wife, an invalid, was sitting in the room watching him burn, but was powerless to extend assistance. The right side of his body was badly burned, but it is thought he will recover.

Ten-year-old Boy Killed and Grandmother Injured.

A despatch from Port Arthur, Ont., says: At Stanley, twenty miles from here, on Wednesday afternoon, a rig containing three persons, while crossing the railway track, was struck by a Canadian Northern work train. Edward McLeur, aged ten, was killed, and his grandmother, Mrs. S. A. McDowell, seriously injured. Miss McLeur, the third member of the party, escaped uninjured. The injured woman was brought here by special train.

THE RETURN OF PROSPERITY

Deposits By Public in Canada Show an Increase of Over $7,000,000.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The bank statement for July was issued on Thursday night. The changes from last month are significant. They indicate that the people of Canada have the money, but are adopting a conservative policy. The statement is of a distinctly hopeful character.

On the liability side of the account the notes in circulation show a decrease of $1,456,000. The balance due to the Dominion Government has been reduced by $5,100,000, while the balance due to provincial Governments has increased by $1,750,000.

Deposits by the public, payable on demand in Canada, have increased by $3,573,000, and payable on notice, $3,779,000. This is regarded as clear evidence that the Canadian public are not risking their money in speculative ventures.

Deposits elsewhere than in Canada show the astonishing increase in the month of $9,056,000.

The total liabilities for July are $756,328,349, an increase of $9,584,069.

Turning to the assets of the banks, the specie in hand shows an increase of $750,000, and Dominion notes of $3,250,000.

The balance due from other banks or agencies in the United States are increased by $7,121,000, and from banks in foreign countries by $9,082,000. Call and short loans in Canada have decreased by $1,083,000, and elsewhere than in Canada have increased by $2,159,000.

Current loans in Canada show a reduction of $9,252,000. The total assets amounted to $936,411,830, as compared with $926,017,629.

THE DANGEROUS FEATHER BED.

Few people seem to know the reason why medical science condemns the use of feather beds.

It is because feather beds are highly hygroscopic—a rather formidable word, but one meaning simply that feathers readily absorb and condense moisture. The body is constantly throwing off waste matter through the skin and the lungs. The feathers in the bed will absorb this waste matter as readily as it will simply atmospheric moisture. The feathers retain the waste matter during the day when the bed is cold—even when it is aired, unless also warmed by sunshine during the time it is exposed to the air.

At night, when the body of the sleeper warms the bed, the feathers renew their hygroscopic action, and throw off the waste matter absorbed the night before. The susceptible body of the sleeper is soon surrounded by a dense and highly poisonous atmosphere, the accumulative effect of which cannot help but be very injurious.

The skin, like the lungs, is continually breathing, and is very sensitive to external influences. Hence arises the need for air baths as well as for water baths. The entire body should be exposed to fresh air every day for as long a time as you can make possible, and all beds should be very thoroughly ventilated.

SPIDER BITES.

The question whether the bite of a spider can have serious effects on the human system having been again raised, the French scientific journal, La Nature, replies, through a physician, that spider bites are not dangerous. Nevertheless, the doctor says that in some rare cases the bite of a spider may produce inflammation to require local treatment. The best plan is to wash the bitten place with pure water, and, if practicable, apply a little antiseptic lotion. In the vast majority of cases the bite even of a large spider causes nothing more than a slight local irritation.

GREAT FIRE AT STAMBOUL.

Terrible Conflagration in Turkish Quarters.

A despatch from Constantinople says: Fire broke out on Sunday afternoon in the Stamboul quarter, and within a very brief period a terrible conflagration was raging. A strong wind carried the flames at great speed, and for six hours they swept over the section, destroying 1,500 houses and shops. The fire was still burning at 9 o'clock on Sunday night, but the wind had decreased considerably.

Forest Fires Continue to Do Great Damage in British Columbia.

A despatch from Cranbrook, B. C., says a bush fire near Kimberley is beyond control, and is running north towards Skookunchuck Creek. Sullivan and Kimberley are safe. There is a bad forest fire one mile east of Moyie. Another fire is burning at Ryan. No rain for over a month has made everything so dry that fire-fighting is very difficult.

TRAGEDIES AT QU'APPELLE.

Two Farmers Killed Within a Few Miles of Each Other.

A despatch from Qu'Appelle, Sask., says: Bulver Stoudt, aged 44, was kicked to death by his team in a runaway accident on Thursday. Rudolph D... a farmer south of here, was thrown out of his rig the same day and killed.

TWO MEN MET DEATH.

Fell on Their Heads and Never Regained Consciousness.

A despatch from Renfrew, Ont., says: While engaged in loading telephone poles on a flat car at Caldwell's station, on Thursday, Jos. Sutherland, of that place, met death almost instantly by falling backward off the top of the car and striking on the back of his head. He died in about an hour after the fall, before medical attendance could arrive. He was 45 years of age, and unmarried.

Chas. McGhean, a prominent farmer of Bromley, and a member of the Township Council, died on Wednesday from injuries received by a fatal fall. He was working in his barn and was standing in the mow when he was struck by the hayfork, knocking him from where he was standing, and falling on the barn floor on his head. He was about 50 years of age, and leaves a family of young children. His wife died about two months ago.

ANOTHER CANOE VICTIM.

Miss Margaret Copland, of Montreal, Drowned.

A despatch from Montreal says: Miss Margaret Copland, of this city, was drowned on Wednesday in Lake St. Joseph, near St. Adolphe de Howard, while out boating. She was paddling with her brother when a gust of wind upset their canoe about 30 feet from the shore. Young Copland immediately dived after his sister, and made a gallant attempt to rescue her, but when close to shore she clung so tightly to him that both went down and he lost his hold. Even then the lad dived several times, but failed to find his sister, and finally became exhausted, and when he reached the shore was picked up unconscious. Miss Copland's body was later recovered. She was a teacher in Prince Albert School.

NEGRO USED THE KNIFE.

Captain of American Barge Stabbed at Quebec.

A despatch from Quebec says: A stabbing affray took place in St. Rochs on Tuesday night about 10.30, in which an American canal boat captain, B. Poshby, of the barge Bigelow, received a serious wound. The party who committed the deed is a negro, and is still at large. It seems that the two men had a dispute with regard to the payment of a bet. The altercation became so heated that the negro whipped out a knife and plunged it into the body of the captain, inflicting a gash four or five inches in length. The unfortunate man was attended by Dr. Edge, who reports the injury as dangerous, though he hardly considers it fatal. The Bigelow is in port with a cargo of coal which is being discharged here.

COTTON SPINNERS' WAGES.

Are to be Reduced Five Per Cent. in Lancashire.

A despatch from Manchester, England, says: The Lancashire Federation of Cotton Spinners has decided to reduce the wages of operatives 5 per cent. If the men decline to accept the reduction they will be locked out for a month. Notice to this effect will at once be given to the operatives, 200,000 of whom would be immediately affected.

YOUNG FOLKS

A GIFT AND A GAME.

Lorraine and Doris Weston always thought it the best of good news when they heard that Aunt Laura was coming for a visit; and even David and Philip, the twins, who were nine years old, and small Mary, who was not quite four, knew that something pleasant was sure to happen when Aunt Laura arrived on her annual visit.

"What do you suppose it will be this time?" asked David, as they all gathered at the sitting-room windows to watch for father, who had driven down to the depot to meet Aunt Laura. "Do you suppose it will be something lovely to do, or do you guess it will be presents?"

"Both!" declared Doris, hopefully.

"It's sure to be something we never thought of before," said Lorraine, with a little skip which meant that she could hardly wait for the good time coming.

Mary skipped, too, and gurgled happily.

When Aunt Laura jumped from father's high cart and came running into the sitting-room, and hugged mamma and kissed all the children, she ran back to the porch and called to father, "Be careful of that box; there is breakable stuff in it!"

"Presents!" whispered Doris; and a little fear that it might be dolls crept into Lorraine's heart, for she was sure that she had all the dolls she wanted. But none of the children asked a question. It was happiness enough for a while just to tell Aunt Laura all that had happened since her last visit, and listen to all the things she had to tell them. The winter was nearly over, and the days were growing longer, and at tea-time Aunt Laura said:

"I know of a lovely thing to do just before Mary goes to bed."

Lorraine and Doris looked at each other joyfully. The good time was beginning so promptly. "As soon as David finishes his supper," continued Aunt Laura, with her pretty smile, "I want him to go to the kitchen, and Maggie will give him something. He must wear his cap and coat. What Maggie gives him he must take very carefully and walk slowly to the front gate, and wait there until we all join him."

"I've finished my supper!" declared David, leaving a round sponge-cake untasted and hurrying toward the kitchen.

Aunt Laura nodded, and in a minute or two said, "Now, Lorraine, you go to the kitchen, take what Maggie gives you very carefully and stand beside David at the gate. Be sure and put on your hat and coat."

One by one the children were sent to the kitchen, even little Mary trotting off quite by herself. Then Aunt Laura went down the path to the gate. And there twinkled five tiny lights from five tiny lanterns, and five eager faces turned toward her as if asking what joy would come next.

The shadows were not very deep now at six o'clock, but the tiny lights looked like dancing fireflies.

"Now," said Aunt Laura, "we will hunt for the daylight. Mary shall go ahead, then Doris and

CONSTABLES HELD AT BAY

Italian Opened Fire on Them With a Winchester Rifle.

A despatch from Parry Sound says: Constables Haystead and Kerr, of Bying Inlet, arrived here on Wednesday, having in charge Frank Sporanco, an Italian, accused of burglary and robbery at Key Harbor Junction, C. P. R., and who so far had eluded arrest. On Tuesday Provincial Constable Chas. Knight and District Constable W. Madigan got trace of the Italian, who was working in a field, near Bying Inlet, for a man named Rooney, an Assyrian. As the constables approached the Italian he opened fire on them with an automatic rifle, the constables replying with revolver shots. Mr. Knight, feigning to have been shot, fell into some bushes. The other constable, seeing his companion fall and thinking him seriously wounded or killed, turned and went to the Inlet for assistance and a medical man. Meantime, as soon as the Italian had emptied the rifle, Knight rose and ran toward him, and on the Italian turning, he shot him in the leg, inflicting a flesh wound in the thigh. As Knight reached the man he was savagely attacked with the clubbed rifle and had his head cut open. He stuck to his man, and using his revolver butt, brought him down and handcuffed him, but by this time became so exhausted with loss of blood and exertions of the strenuous fight that he was compelled to remain on the battlefield. Shortly afterward Madigan returned with assistance and both wounded constable and prisoner were conveyed to Bying Inlet, where the constable is confined to his bed from the injuries. Sporanco is one of the three Italians who broke into a boarding-house at Key Harbor Junction and stole about $80, the other two having been previously caught by Knight and landed in jail here, but from which they escaped in a clever manner and are still at large. Knight deserves great praise for his courage and good judgment. The country is being searched for the escaped two.

NO FEAR OF FUEL FAMINE.

Big Stocks are Being Held in the West.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: There is no danger of a fuel famine in the west next winter, according to advices being received from dealers throughout the country, they having taken the precaution to order before the crop movement begins. Wholesalers here believe the stocks are ample for all. Harvesting is progressing very rapidly, according to advices gathered for the Ogilvie Milling Company by their agents. The yield in many cases far exceeds the estimates made before thrashing, especially on light lands in southern Manitoba. Around Plum Coulee, where a yield of ten bushels had been expected, nineteen was the return from the thrasher, and graded good No. 1. Many other points report similar conditions. Manager Black of the Ogilvie Company, referring to the harvest reports in general received by him, said: "It is safe to say that 50 per cent. of the wheat has been successfully garnered and the entire balance is free from danger of frost, which may now come. Thrashing was started at principal points in the Province on Monday last."

"DEAD" WOMAN REVIVED.

Resuscitated After Her Life Had Apparently Fled.

A despatch from New Britain, Conn., says: After having been pronounced dead by the medical examiner as a result of carbolic acid poisoning on Tuesday night, and permission for the removal of her body given, Mrs. Eva Washkiewski, of this city was later revived by another physician and is now expected to recover. Mrs. Washkiewski, who is 48 years old, drank a large quantity of the acid, and then summoned her friends and boarders in the house, saying that she wished to say good-bye to them, as she was going on a long journey. She then lay down on a couch and

FADS AND FANCIES.

A novel bracelet is of heavy antique filigree, gold or silver, broad where the setting appears. The setting usually is of jade.

Shrewd fashion prophets of Paris are venturing to predict that next year will be one of great simplicity in both hats and gowns.

With the sheath gown and such other audacities firmly excluded, the directoire style is still the all conquering mode of the day.

Charmingly effective lingerie gowns that are, notwithstanding their beauty, eminently practical, are made of eyelet embroidery of various widths.

One of the variations of the directoire dress is called the Tanagra—named after the Tanagra sculptures so admired in France 100 years ago.

Fall hats will be large and toques small. Soft and wavy felts are to be much in demand. Velvet asters and roses in bright colors them.

Linen suitings so closely resembling suede that the difference cannot be told a few feet away make good looking shopping suits for the warm weather.

A winged chapeau, a jumper dress of embroidered net, and one of the newest cretonne coats, with cretonne strappings and black satin bindings, serve to complete a fetching costume.

Trionan hats are fashionable just now—those wide, wandering creations with enormous brims and one or two large flowers for their only trimming with perhaps a touch of black velvet.

England, says: The Lancashire Federation of Cotton Spinners has decided to reduce the wages of operatives 5 per cent. If the men decline to accept the reduction they will be locked out for a month. Notice to this effect will at once be given to the operatives, 200,000 of whom would be immediately affected in the event of a refusal to accept the demands of their employers. If the spinning operatives should be locked out the weavers would also be compelled to cease work, which would greatly increase the number affected.

SIX BURNED TO DEATH.

Terrible Result of the Race War in Tennessee.

A despatch from Knoxville, Tenn., says: On Rich Mountain, several miles east of Jellico and near the Anthracite mining section, a negro shanty, where a helpless negro and her five children had lived, was found burned to the ground on Wednesday morning. None of the inmates had escaped. The burning is supposed to have been the work of the white miners and mountaineers, who objected to the negroes remaining in that section. For more than a week racial feeling has been inflamed in several of the mines in the Jellico district.

SIX BURNED TO DEATH.

Children Lost Their Lives at Colfax, Washington.

A despatch from Colfax, Wash., says: Six children are dead and two others are burned so seriously that recovery is doubtful at the H. W. Schultz ranch between Colfax and Beltrouse, resulting from a fire that destroyed their home on Wednesday night. Four of the dead were children of Schultz. The other two were children of W. W. Fox, a brother-in-law. The men were away harvesting, and the mothers were attending a theatrical performance. The two eldest Schultz girls attempted to rescue the children, but lost the way to the door, and were forced to drop the babies to make their own escape. The cause of the fire is a mystery.

STRIKERS REFUSE PAY.

Ignore Notice Issued by the Railway Company.

A despatch from Montreal says: The Canadian Pacific Railway Company on Friday engaged a hundred more mechanics, and the greater number of these were sent west. The company claims that sufficient men are now engaged in the Angus shops to keep them going all right. While there are plenty of car men, more metal workers are wanted, and these are being gradually secured. The company further contends that there has been no interference with the train service, and no trouble whatever is anticipated in handling the Western grain. The company on Friday issued notices to the men to draw their pay for the work they had done this month, but, acting on the instructions of the union, the strikers paid no attention to the notice.

terms, and five eager faces turned toward her as if asking what joy would come next.

The shadows were not very deep now at six o'clock, but the tiny lights looked like dancing fireflies.

"Now," said Aunt Laura, "we will hunt for the daylight. Mary shall go ahead, then Doris and Lorraine next, and the boys can walk right behind me." So the little procession filed down the shadowy country road. Little flickers of light could be seen here and there from the houses of neighbors, and at these Mary would wave her lantern and say, happily, "Not daylight."

Down by the meadow bars two pheasants rose noisily and fled across the road; and when they reached the deep shadow of the big oak, then, indeed, the hunt for daylight really began. It was quite dark close to the big tree, and Aunt Laura stood all in line and told them to look toward the meadow fence, and walked in that direction.

Lorraine could not keep from skipping, and Mary, who always wanted to do what Lorraine did, skipped, too, and the small lanterns twinkled brightly.

"Aunt Laura had a package," said Philip in a whisper.

"It's better than daylight; it's better than anything!" declared David, as the third cloud of rose-colored tiny stars went toward the sky, followed by Roman candles and the red lights.

"Anyway, it was lovely," said Lorraine, with a long breath of satisfaction. Then all the tiny lanterns were swung gaily, and all the children turned away happily toward home.—Youth's Companion.

QUAKE IN CALIFORNIA.

Over a Hundred Chimneys Thrown Down at Eureka.

A despatch from Eureka, Cal., says: Three sharp earthquake shocks which knocked down more than a hundred chimneys, shattered about forty plate glass windows in the business portion of Eureka, broke much crockery in the houses and sent many people hurrying from their beds into the streets, occurred here early on Wednesday. The damage reported so far is estimated at between $2,000 and $3,000. The first and sharpest shock came at 2:58 a.m. It was almost as severe as the one felt here on April 18, 1906. At 3:03 another slighter shock was experienced, followed by a third at 5:30 o'clock. The first shock caused practically all the damage. Reports from the Seazy ranch near Freshwater, six miles north, say that the earthquake left a big fissure half a mile long.

GAVE LIFE FOR TRUST.

Express Messenger Sorenson Killed at Enderlin.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Otto Sorenson, a messenger in the employ of the Western Express Company, was killed by robbers, who attempted to rob his car at Enderlin, N. D., on Thursday night. Sorenson travels on the Soo line to Winnipeg. He was found dead in his car. The position in which he was lying indicated that he had had a terrible struggle. The robbers fled in terror after killing their man. He leaves a wife and two children who live in St. Paul.

Mrs. Washkiewski, who is 48 years old, drank a large quantity of the acid, and then summoned her friends and boarders in the house, saying that she wished to say good-bye to them, as she was going on a long journey. She then lay down on a couch and soon became unconscious. The police were notified, and taking with them Medical Examiner T. C. Wright went to the house. Dr. Wright, it is alleged, pronounced the woman dead and gave permission for the removal of the body. Soon after his departure, it is said, another physician revived and restored her to consciousness.

TRAIN AND AUTO COLLIDED.

Man and Wife Killed Near Minneapolis.

A despatch from Minneapolis, Minn., says: John Cluek, a wealthy Minneapolis brewer, and his wife were killed on Wednesday at Cottageood, Lake Minnetonka, in a collision between their automobile and a train on the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway. Two other occupants of the automobile, Mrs. Edward Lebaire of New York city and her two-year-old daughter, both received injuries which may prove fatal.

RAVAGES OF CHOLERA.

Working Its Way Down Black Sea Along Caucasus Coast.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: The centre of virulence of the cholera epidemic has been transferred to Rostov-on-the-Don, where 31 new cases and 10 deaths were reported Aug. 17. From the Province of Astrakhan 61 new cases and 21 deaths were reported on the same day. The cholera is now working its way down the Black Sea along the Caucasus coast.

W. C. SRAUF APPOINTED.

New General Manager for Lake Superior Corporation.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, says: W. C. Srauf of Charlottesville, W. Va., has been appointed General Manager of the Lake Superior Corporation. He is expected to arrive this week to take charge of the allied industries of the company. Srauf was formerly General Manager of the Kanawha & West Virginia Railway.

Trion hats are fashionable just now—those wide, wandering creations with enormous brims and one or two large flowers for their only trimming with perhaps a touch of black velvet.

The newest sash is of black chiffon, made with a chou or rosette bow and long, sweeping ends. It is fastened either in the back or on the left side in the front. In either case it has no belt.

In the latest dancing frock sleeves are practically dispensed with, there being no concealment of the arm from shoulder to finger tip. Gloves are likewise as often conspicuous by their absence as by their presence.

Heavy net and the long, popular filet lace are both excellent for afternoon gowns for midsummer, and these two lend themselves especially well to the new tunic and draped models and are good placed over silk or crepe de chine as overskirts.

The newest hat pins for tailored or ready to wear hats are of imitation amber or yellowish onyx, spike shaped, and looking for all the world like an elongated pear. For an all black dressy hat the one correct pin is a long, narrow oblong, set in rhinestones.

Some reflection of the second empire millinery fashions are found in tiny shapes of fine straw in natural color or pastel shades, with a prim garland of old world favorite blooms, forget me nots, lilies of the valley, or roses of exquisite soft coloring.

The proper neckwear for the tailored suits are the tailor stocks. These are of white lines edged with the colored stripes. They have the small jabots of white frills edged with the striped linen and trimmed with buttons.

THREE DOZEN MUST DIE

Many Condemned to Death By Russian Courts in Two Days.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: There were ten more death sentences in Russia on Wednesday, five at Vilna, two at Warsaw and three at Lodz. On Tuesday there were 26, a sinister record. Two of the men were former sailors attached to the Black Sea fleet, and had been found guilty of taking the lead in an attempt to pillage an estate. The others were convicted of train robberies and murders. There were two executions on Tuesday at Warsaw, one at Tiflis and several at St. Petersburg.

A second unsuccessful attempt was made on Tuesday evening to assassinate the Chief of Police of Pyatigorsk, M. Von Oglio. Three men emptied their revolvers at the Chief, but failed to hit him. The police shot down one of the revolutionists, but the other two escaped.

A despatch from Tcherdyn tells of an armed collision between the inhabitants of two neighboring villages over the ownership of a piece of disputed land, in which two men were killed and several seriously wounded.

Buy Hair at Auction?

At any rate, you seem to be getting rid of it on auction-sale principles: "going, going, g-o-n-e!" Stop the auction with Ayer's Hair Vigor. It certainly checks falling hair; no mistake about this. It acts as a regular medicine; makes the scalp healthy. Then you must have healthy hair, for it's nature's way.

ministry which he is never able to substantiate. His latest attack has been upon the Marine department for extravagance, the result has been that the minister has laid off a number of men in Prescott where Reid lives, and Reid is the object of general denunciation in consequence. Reid tells the people of Grenville, that when the Conservatives come into power he will be made minister of Marine and Fisheries, which causes as much amusement in some quarters as it would annoyance to Mr. Borden if it ever comes to his ears.

This is a sample of argument used to secure votes. The substantial Conservatives of Grenville have been so annoyed at Reid's actions, constantly attacking the Marine department which has resulted in direct loss to the merchants of Prescott and vicinity that they have refused to support him any more. Leading Conservatives openly state they will drive him from public life. Yet this is the man who has manufactured a large portion of the fictitious scandal which is the sole campaign material of the Conservative party, and in his own constituency he is repudiated by at least half of his own party.

Foster and Immorality.

Another man who charges himself with the task of denouncing immorality in public men is Mr. Foster, who hopes to be Finance minister. This gentleman has violated the social conventions, and been charged by the public press with conduct which should cause him to hide his head in shame, instead of which he brazenly goes before the people and talks of purity in politics, and a high standard of morality in public men. As evidence of his utter unfitness for public office, Mr. Foster has been guilty of worse things than juggling with the trust funds of the Foresters, and running the country into millions of dollars of debt. North Toronto will never select Mr. Foster as a representative, if the advice of the Toronto News and Montreal Star is followed, they both declare him unfit to be an advisor of the Crown. The electors have not forgotten that Mr. Foster was once unseated for corruption, and finally had to leave his own province to secure a seat.

The people cannot afford to place in power a party which would offer this man a cabinet position. His exposure with relation to the Foresters should be sufficient to cause the people to reject him, although the fact that he applied for a free timber limit, thus joining the army of Tory looters of the public domain would supply additional cause if any were required.

Questions for Foster.

What does Foster offer the electors? Nothing but scandal charges he made in the House which have been clearly explained away, and dropped, but revamped for political purposes but without the complete answer which should accompany them. Foster has the faculty of making the worse appear the better cause, and he relies, upon the lack of information among his audience. Mr. Foster should be asked these questions:

You denounce friends of the government as "timber stealers."—Did you ever apply for fifty square miles of timber, free?

You denounce immorality in a public man—Have you yourself ever violated the social conventions?

You characterize the minister of Marine and Fisheries as a "thief" for taking money voted for one purpose and using it for another.—Were you not found guilty of doing this same thing when in power, and did you not excuse the act by saying "it all comes

SORE ACHING BLISTERED FEET

Farmers, farmers' wives, store girls, clerks, bricklayers, policemen and postmen—all who have to be on their feet all day, and suffer from sore feet, chafing, or blistering will find relief in Zam-Buk.

Mr. Wm. Ashley, 527 Seigneurs St., Montreal, says:—"I suffered cruelly from sore feet, which became raw and blistered. Some days I was hardly able to walk home from work, and others I had to leave off about 3 o'clock. Powders, salves and ointments of all kinds I tried in vain, sometimes actually working with them in my boots. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and in a few hours it reduced the smarting and soreness. I kept on with it, putting a little on each night. In a few days the soreness was all gone.

Questions for Ames.

There are many general questions which should be propounded to every Conservative who asks for the suffrages of the people, and unless they can be answered satisfactorily the aspirants for political honors should be retired to private life.

Mr. Ames should be asked why he dropped the timber investigation when witnesses were present awaiting examination. Why he declined to call either Mr. Burrows, M. P., or Mr. Turfitt, M. P., who were present before the public accounts committee, although he (Ames) suggested that the one secured timber limits owing to collusion with the other, a former government official?

He should be asked why, when he had made false accusations with regard to Mr. Burrows, who had corrected them in the House, and after accepting Mr. Burrows' denial he should repeat the statement on the public platform knowing it to be false?

Why does Mr. Ames conceal the fact that several cheques were put in for timber tenders by Mr. Burrows, and object to evidence that several cheques were also put in by other parties?

Why does Mr. Ames conceal the fact that investigation and survey of timber berths had been provided by the minister of the interior even before he (Ames) attacked the policy of the government?

POLITICAL NEWS!

To the man who takes a pride in his country and studies the public issues of the day, it must be somewhat embarrassing, upon the approach of a general election, to look in vain for a policy, put forward by the party seeking to regain power.

The Conservatives have nothing to advance which by any possibility could prove attractive to the country at large, they are therefore compelled to fall back upon charges of graft and scandal all of which have been disposed of, not only to the satisfaction of the Liberal party, but to the utter discomfiture of the Conservatives.

Tories Absurd Promises.

In the constituencies the Conservatives are following the most disreputable tactics. Dr. Reid of Grenville, who is out of his element in parliament, and who made the reckless charges as to the "Arctic" failed to prove his case before the committee he himself asked for, and he emerged from the inquiry discredited, and his party was made ridiculous. This is the gentleman who is foremost in the House with allegations against the taking money voted for one purpose and using it for another.—Were you not found guilty of doing this same thing when in power, and did you not excuse the act by saying "it all comes out of the same pocket?"

You charge as scandalous that the "Arctic" expedition cost the government $1,03 per man per day—Is it not true that when you were Minister of Marine and Fisheries you outfitted a vessel, the Neptune, in 1896, for precisely the same purposes at $1.30 per man per day?

Did you not demand from the government a commission to examine into the investments of insurance money, claiming that illegal acts were being perpetrated—and did not the commission find you guilty of gambling illegally with the funds of the Foresters?

Did you not denounce the middle man who dealt with the government, and strenuously object to the payment of commissions—and did you not exact a commission when dealing with lands which the Union Trust Company were buying, you at the time being its manager?

Did you not characterize as grossly dishonest the formation of a company to deal with the government so as to hide the transaction from the public gaze, and is it not true that, finding the Foresters could not, as an institution speculate in lands, you formed the Union Trust Company in which you influenced the Foresters to place $2,000,000, and as manager of this company did you not illegally venture the trust funds of the Foresters?

Did you not criticize the government for not becoming parties to the treaty with Japan, and after Canada was made a party did you not denounce the government for so doing?

Did you not denounce the Liberal government for not keeping the land for the settler—and is it not a fact that the Conservative government voted to railways no less than 56,087,972 acres, while the Liberal government has not given away a single acre for railway purposes?

Did you not charge the Liberal government with improvidently alienating the timber of the country—and is it not a fact that during the Conservative administration they disposed of 29,302 miles of which 23,957 square miles were given away without one cent going into the treasury?

ZAM-BUG
GIVES INSTANT EASE

Can you deny that in one year, 1883 the Conservatives gave away to their friends and supporters 10,326 square miles of timber, free, and is it not true that the Liberal government has only disposed of 6,456 square miles of timber since coming into power, twelve years ago, and in every instance by public competition to the highest bidder?

Is it not a fact that the Conservative government increased the public debt by $118,000,000 when in office, and is it not true that the Liberal government has only increased the public debt $19,000,000 in twelve years, and this for purposes of the National Transcontinental, a public asset?

Did you not, when Finance Minister, borrow money to pay the running expenses of the government and have not the Liberal government had a large surplus every year since coming into office?

Did you not advocate in the House the advantages of borrowing money to construct public works instead of paying it out of current revenue—and has not the Liberal government been able to construct public works to the extent of over $120,000,000 without borrowing a cent?

Is it true that the loans now falling due amounting to many millions, represent money borrowed by yourself when Finance Minister?

Can you deny the fact that the total trade under the Liberal government last year was $650,793,131, or $411,768,000 greater than the last year the Conservatives were in office?

Can you point to a single scandal so called, brought up by the Conservative party, which has not been completely dissipated and satisfactorily explained?

Can you deny that your charges against government officials with regard to accepting timber tenders were disproved in the House, and have you forgotten that they were described as malicious lies, and you satisfied when referred to as the man who had circulated them?

Have you forgotten the pitiable spectacle you presented in the House, when the Minister of Justice literally flayed you alive for your dealings with the trust funds of the widows and orphans?

Has it faded from your memory that you accepted a pension from the Liberal government of $3,500 a year for doing nothing, and how you gratefully refrained from criticizing public expenditure—and can you remember how you came again to the attack when the pension was taken away from you?

The above questions should be asked of Mr. Foster every time he has the audacity to appear on the public platform, and the answers should be insisted upon. A man who desires the people to place him in charge of their affairs should submit himself to close examination, for the tone of public life according to the Conservatives, must be raised, and upon the answers to these questions will depend whether or

Why does Mr. Ames conceal the fact that investigation and survey of timber berths had been provided by the minister of the interior even before he (Ames) attacked the policy of the government?

Why does Mr. Ames constantly affirm that Mr. Burrows is the owner of all the timber tendered for by the Imperial Pulp Company, when he knows to the contrary?

Is Mr. Ames aware that the Conservative government gave away the timber free, and that in every instance the Liberal government gave it to the highest bidder at public competition?

Questions for Other Tories.

Messrs. Fowler and Lefurgy should be asked to explain how they came to secure the good offices of Mr. Mann so as to know where the railway line was going, and thus be enabled to select desirable land. They should be asked whether such action is consistent for a member of parliament, and do they regard it as desirable for members of Parliament to use their influence in this way?

These gentlemen might also give the history of the transaction with Mr. Foster as manager of the Union Trust Company, and how they came to borrow from him the money of the Foresters to put the deal through?

Mr. Bennett should be asked to explain what he meant when he asked for easy terms, when negotiating for an island in Georgian Bay.

Messrs. Haggart, Tisdale, Ward and Bergeron should be called upon to explain their action in applying for free timber berths when the Conservative government were in power, and how they reconcile their conduct with their present attitude of criticizing the government in their timber administration?

Tories Promise Anything.

Dr. Reid of Grenville should be asked to explain the bill against him for work done in the government shops at Prescott, and the gas pipethat connected the government tank with his starch factory in the same town. Dr. Reid might also be asked to give his authority for the promise that this same starch factory (now idle) would be purchased by the Conservative government for purposes of the Marine department, should the Conservatives gain power.

Mr. Bergeron should be asked why he objects to the British preference, and will he abolish it, should his party be successful at the polls.

Questions for Mr. Borden.

Mr. Borden should be invited to explain whether he proposes that the new provinces should pay the Dominion government for their lands. He should be asked if this is what he meant by "restoring them on fair terms."

He should be asked whether he approves of direct responsibility to the people, if so, why he advocates government by commission over which the people have no control.

He might be asked to explain how he proposes to raise the money to pur-

The Kid You Have Always Bought

Cures Woman's Weaknesses.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system. He continues "in Helonias we have a medication which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fife further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, the pelvis, the uterus; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the pelvis, of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhoea (suppressed or absent monthly period), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and systemic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. H. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhages, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhoea (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

chase all the telegraph lines and telephone lines in the country, so that he can put in effect his promise to acquire them.

He might be asked how he expects to raise a revenue without imposing an import tax.

He might be asked if he intends to cancel the charter of the National Transcontinental Railway, if so, how he will provide for the damages and supply the needed transportation facilities in the north west?

He might be asked what he intends to offer the people of the west in place of the proposed Hudson Bay Railway?

The people would like to know whether he intends taking into his cabinet Messrs. Foster, Fowler, Reid or Haggart, each of these gentlemen having stated that he has promised to do so.

Leave Well Enough Alone.

The above are very pertinent and very important questions to the electors and they must be answered before the people can place any faith in the Conservative leader or his party. The Conservatives having no policy to offer, cannot rely upon unsubstantiated charges of wrong doing. The people have not forgotten the fearful days of Tory corruption and bad government. Having an honest and capable administration led by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, looking carefully after the welfare of the people at large, the country is well satisfied and no change is desirable or necessary. It will be many years before the great reform party, which rescued the country from the grasp of the most disreputable men Canada ever had in public life, will be called upon to relinquish the responsibilities of office. The Liberal government is engaged in great works for the benefit of all the people, and it would not be the course of wisdom to undo what

MISLEADING NAMES.

Terms In Science That Belie the Products to Which They Apply.

There are terms in certain departments of science that positively misname the products to which they are applied.

The word "oil" in its more comprehensive and indiscriminate uses is made to include hydrocarbons, like petroleum, and also many other substances that have an oily appearance, like "oil of vitriol," which is not oil at all, but sulphuric acid.

Strictly speaking, the mineral oils, including all petroleum products, are not oil, although we speak of "coal oil" and "kerosene oil."

The best classifications of oils do not include mineral hydrocarbons, like naphtha, paraffin and petroleum, but treat only the two well defined groups—fixed oils and fats and the essential or volatile oils.

"Copperas" is not copper, but sulphate of iron. "Salt of lemon" has nothing to do with the fruit of the lemon tree, but is potassium binoxalate or potash treated with oxalic acid.

"Carbolic acid" is not an acid, but a phenol. In structure it is allied to the alcohols and has only slight acid properties. "Soda water" has no trace of soda. "Sulphuric acid" contains no sulphur. "Sugar of lead" is innocent of sugar.

"Cream of tartar" has nothing to do with cream nor "milk of lime" with milk. "German silver" is a stranger to silver, and "black lead" is not lead at all, but graphite. "Mosaic gold" is a sulphide of tin.

These misleading names have come down from the vocabulary of an early and inaccurate chemistry. As popular science extends the old terms are yielding to the more scientific nomenclature.

JOKED HIMSELF IN.

How "Private" John Allen Got Himself Elected to Congress.

Here is Champ Clark's defense of humor, if it needs one:

"The dry-as-dusts solemnly asseverate that humor never did any good. Now, let's see. How did 'Private' John Allen of Mississippi get to congress? Joked himself in. One bit of humor sent him to Washington, a national lawmaker. Opposing him for the congressional nomination was the Confederate General Tucker. They met on the stump. General Tucker closed one of his speeches as follows:

"Seventeen years ago tonight, my fellow citizens, after a hard fought battle on yonder hill, I bivouacked under yonder clump of trees. Those of you who remember as I do the times that tried men's souls will not, I hope, forget their humble servant when the primaries shall be held."

"That was a strong appeal in those days, but John raised the general at his own game. 'My fellow citizens,' he said, 'what General Tucker says to you about bivouacking under yonder clump of trees is true. It is also true, my fellow citizens, that I was a vedette picket and stood guard over him while he slept. Now, then, fellow citizens, all you who were generals and had privates to stand over you while you slept vote for General Tucker, and all of you who were privates and stood guard over the generals while they slept vote for Private John Allen.' The people caught on, took John at his word and sent him to congress, where he stayed until the word was filled with his renown."

OLD CLOTHES IN AFRICA.

The Natives Often Make Dreadful Mistakes With European Attire.

The "ol' clo' man" is a familiar figure in American streets and one by no means without picturesqueness, but no American dealer in old clothes has established a business of such extent of interest as that of John Hyman of London, whose specialty is to purchase showy costumes and discarded military and official uniforms for disposal in the orient and Africa.

Even the retiring lord mayors of London have become almost by official tradition his customers, and the cocked hat, gold laced coat and knee breeches at which during one season London has gazed with awe in the famous pageant of the lord mayor's procession are likely the next season to delight the eyes of darkest Africa upon the proud person of a darkest African.

"I have visited most of the great oriental bazars and watched our goods being purchased," says Mr. Hyman. "I have seen blacks solemnly walking around with waistcoats buttoned behind instead of before and even men wearing ladies' costumes. I have seen enormously big fellows in clothes so small I could not imagine for the life of me how they got into them or how they could get out again unless the stitching gave way."

The Prince de Joinville when off the Gabon coast once received on his ship an official visit from two chiefs, father and son, who must, one would think, have been Mr. Hyman's customers. They were known as Big Denis and Little Denis, and each owned for ceremonial occasions a military uniform.

That of Big Denis was a French general's, which his wives managed to get him into. That of Little Denis was a hussar's, and its intricate cut, numerous buttons, straps and buckles and painfully small size proved quite too much for him. He sent the prince a despairing message begging help, and a relief party of delighted midshipmen was sent to dress him and bring him aboard.

They fulfilled their errand; but, with the mischievousness of their kind, they so tightened every fastening of his overtight attire that the poor youth was nearly bursting with combined pride and suffocation when he arrived, and it was evident he could never be got out of his unwonted finery by any method less drastic than cutting him out.

Still, no manner of wearing a complete costume ever equals in comic effect some of the savages' combinations of unrelated items. One venerable African chieftain received his European guests with an antiquated evening shoulder cape of pink flowered satin and spangles worn about his waist as an apron, while his white wool was martially crowned by a military helmet.

Still another conducted important negotiations with an exploring party clad simply and impressively in a lady's large Gainsborough hat, a pair of cavalry boots and a necklace of glistening tin ornaments used to decorate Christmas trees.

DENBIGH.

For last week

Rev. C. Beer, of Ottawa, was an esteemed guest at the Lutheran parsonage for about a week, and assisted Rev. G. Daehsel in conducting some Missionary service on Sunday last, preaching a very interesting and instructive sermon about Foreign Mission at the afternoon service. He started on his homeward journey Wednesday, accompanied by Rev. G. Daehsel via Eganville and Pembroke, as he intends to pay a visit to their confreres Rees, G. Black bush at Eganville, and C. Zarke, of Pembroke.

Mrs. H. D. Bryan, of Rochester, N. Y. is spending a few weeks visiting at her brother's, Mr. Chas. E. Wienceke, and is also favoring her many other friends here with an occasional call.

Misses Louisa and Martha Stein, of Ottawa, are enjoying a month's outing and a good visit with their father, Mr. C. Stein.

Mr. Geo. Vritsch, of Renfrew, and David Youmans, Jr., of Sudbury, have also arrived and intend to spend a couple of weeks with their parents here.

Masters Fred and Walter Hoffman, sons of Rev. E. Hoffman, of Berlin, Ont., who have been enjoying a month visiting at the parsonage, have returned home to resume city life.

The Cookbook.

Melted butter is a very good substitute for olive oil in salad dressing. Many prefer the butter to oil.

Turnips boiled in their jackets like beets are much better than when pared. Adding a little sugar to the water will correct any bitterness.

Fish that is to be fried should be ordered to be sent early, as it cooks much better if previously rolled some time in a clean cloth to insure perfect dryness.

Scoop out as many large lemons as there are guests, scallop the edges and fill the cups with French peas mixed with a stiff mayonnaise. Arrange the lemons on crisp lettuce leaves and serve with cheese and crackers.

A woman who is past master in sandwich making prefers fried ham to boiled for sandwiches. She cooks the ham slowly in the frying pan, giving it just enough browning to improve the flavor. Then she reduces it by grinding to a veritable powder and mixes it with mayonnaise.

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this, druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart, and Kidney nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment, you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by—ALL DEALERS.

THE CHARTER OAK.

Bells Told and Funeral Dirges Played When It Fell.

The charter oak of Hartford was a white oak. The story goes that when James, duke of York, ascended the throne of England and sent Andros to take away all colonial charters Connecticut alone refused to surrender hers. Andros was furious over this defiance, and Oct. 31, 1687, he returned to the assembly hall of Hartford with a body of soldiers and demanded instant surrender of the charter, which lay in a box on the table. A hot discussion followed. Finally Andros stretched out his hand to seize the disputed paper. Then the candles were suddenly extinguished, and the people who had gathered on the street outside rushed in a disorderly crowd into the hall. There was a period of wild confusion in the dark, and when the candles were finally relighted no charter was to be found. It had been removed by Captain Wadsworth and concealed in the oak, which ever afterward bore its name.

The oak was even then old. "When the first settlers were clearing their land the Indians begged that it might be spared. 'It has been the guide of our ancestors for centuries,' they said, 'as to the time of planting our corn. When the leaves are the size of a mouse's ears, then is the time to put seed into the ground.' The Indians' request was granted, and the tree, afterward becoming the custodian of the lost charter, became famous for all time. It fell in a windstorm Aug. 21, 1856, and so deeply was it venerated that at sunset on the day of its fall the bells of the city were tolled and a band of music played funeral dirges over its ruins.

At the time of its fall its circumference one foot from the ground was twenty-five feet, and it was estimated to be over 600 years old.

Bismarck's Love of Nature.

Speaking of the country and the long walks he took daily, Bismarck said he loved nature, but the amount of life he saw awed him, and it took a great deal of faith to believe that an "all seeing eye" could notice every living atom when one realized what it meant. "Have you ever sat on the grass and examined it closely? There is enough life in one square yard to appall you," he said.—Lady Randolph Churchill.

INCURABLE HEART TROUBLE

LOOKED FOR DEATH IN A SHORT TIME.

Entirely Cured by "Fruit-a-tives."

"Gentlemen.—The days of miracles are not all past and I feel that my complete recovery, from what seemed inevitable death, is practically a miracle. I suffered from severe Indigestion and Dyspepsia for nearly two years. I could not take food without fearful distress and I became almost a skeleton as the result of the suffering. I could not do any work and became so run down and weak that I could hardly walk. I was attended by two experienced doctors. They both pronounced my case heart failure and incurable, and I looked forward for death in a short time. I not only had the doctors but after they gave me up I tried many remedies and treatments but got no better.

At this time my son asked me to try "Fruit-a-tives," and from the outset of taking these wonderful tablets I was better and gradually this medicine completely cured me. I took a large number of boxes, perhaps a dozen, and now I am entirely cured and I have gained over thirty pounds in weight.

I am now so well that I have sold my farm and bought 200 acres more land. I make this statement voluntarily for the sake of humanity, and I am convinced that "Fruit-a-tives" is a wonderful remedy that will cure stomach trouble where doctors and everything else fail."

(Sgd) Henry Speers, J.P.

The doctors were all wrong. Mr. Speers had what we call "irritated heart." Indigestion and dyspepsia completely upset the stomach. Poisonous gases were formed which swelled the walls of the stomach and pressed against the heart.

"Fruit-a-tives" immediately strengthened the stomach, insured sound digestion and regulated the bowels. There were no poisons—no noxious gases remained in the system, and the heart was no longer irritated. Then the pain and fluttering stopped.

"Fruit-a-tives" is put up in two sizes 25c and 50c. If your dealer has not both, write Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

CHAPTER II.

Old Love and New.

"WELL, here I am," announced a tall, slender youth, entering the deserted salon a few minutes later with Nish at his side. "I'm here at my country's call, all right, but my confounded country doesn't seem to be on hand to meet me."

His graceful walk was not wholly steady, and there was a flush on the handsome young face. The late arrival was Prince Danilo of Marsovia, attache of the Marsovia legation at Paris. As a diplomat he had scarcely scored a success, for he had a delightfully normal aversion to work and a simple, unflinching joy in the amusements of Maxim's and his clubs.

"I'll hunt up his excellency at once,"

"But no man ever before loved as I love!" protested Cascada, his voice unconsciously rising in his emotion. "You are all the world to me. Until I met you I never thought I could!"

"Ring off!" grumbled Danilo in his sleep, vaguely bothered by the loud voice.

Sonia started.

"Some one is here!" she whispered, pointing toward the hidden couch.

"You are mistaken," contradicted Cascada, "and even if it were so I am willing for all the world to know how I!"

A long, blissful, sonorous snore from the couch.

Sonia laughed, her eyes alight with amusement.

"Snoring and romance don't go well together, marquis," she observed, "and as the snoring doesn't seem likely to stop the romance must. You say you are in love with me, and I know you are in love with my fortune. Good-by."

"You misjudge me cruelly!" Cascada protested.

"Oh, no, I don't! Men are all alike. Good-by."

REMARKABLE INVENTION

FOR THE

CULTURE OF HAIR

THE EVANS VACUUM CAP is a practical invention constructed on scientific and hygienic principles by the simple means of which a free and normal circulation is restored throughout the scalp. The minute blood vessels are gently stimulated to activity, thus allowing the food supply which can only be derived from the blood, to be carried to the hair roots, the effect of which are quickly seen in a healthy, vigorous growth of hair. There is no rubbing, and as no drugs or chemicals of whatsoever kind are employed there is nothing to cause irritation. It is only necessary to wear the Cap three or four minutes daily.

60 DAYS' FREE TRIAL! The Company's Guarantee.

An EVANS VACUUM CAP will be sent you for sixty days' free trial. I you do not see a gradual development of a new growth of hair, and are not convinced that the Cap will completely restore your hair, you are at liberty to return the Cap with no expense whatever to yourself. It is requested, as an evidence of good faith, that the price of the Cap be deposited with the Chancery Lane Safe Deposit Company of London, the largest financial and business institution of the kind in the world, who will issue a receipt guaranteeing that the money will be returned in full, on demand without questions or comment, at any time during the trial period.

The eminent Dr. E. N. LOVE, in his address to the Medical Board on the subject of Alopecia does not state that if a means could be devised to bring nutrition to the hair follicles their roots, without resorting to any irritating process, the problem of that growth would be solved. Therefore, when the EVANS VACUUM CAP was submitted to the observations the had previously made before the Medical Board.

Dr. W. MOORE, referring to the invention, says that the principle upon which the Evans Vacuum Cap is founded is absolutely correct and indisputable.

An illustrated and descriptive book of the Evans Vacuum Cap will be sent, post free, on application.

THE SECRETARY, EVANS VACUUM CAP CO., LIMITED.

Regent House, Regent Street, London, W.

THE LATE ARRIVAL WAS PRINCE DANILO.

Nish was assuring the prince. "Are—are you quite in condition to see him, if I may?"

"Oh, I'm all right enough," yawned Danilo, "only I forgot to go to bed last night. If I could reel off a few yards of sleep!"

"Perhaps I could find you some place to—"

"I'd prefer a desk, if you can find one. I always sleep best at my desk. But I suppose—"

"There is a couch, sir, over in the corner behind the palms. How would that do? You could get a nice nap there, and in a little while I'd find his excellency for you. But, sir, if I may say so, why do you waste your life in dissipation when you might marry and settle down? Just think, now! Would not a dear little wife and a home of your own be better worth while than all your clubs? I leave it to you—"

"You leave it to me?" retorted Danilo. "Then I make it clubs."

"But, if I may say so—"

"You may not," interrupted Danilo, crossing to the couch and throwing himself at full length among its cushions. "By by! If you're waking, call me early?"

He spread a handkerchief over his face and in a moment was sound asleep, leaving Nish to tiptoe out in search of Popoff.

For a few minutes no sound was audible in the empty salon save the distant swell and fall of dance music, punctuated by the slumbrous prince's heavy breathing.

Then Natalie hurried in with De Joldin. Both looked anxious.

"How careless of me!" the ambassador's wife was exclaiming. "Where can I have dropped the miserable fan? If my husband should pick it up and find on it those words you were foolish enough to write—I wonder if I left it in the niche on the stairs when we were sitting there. Let's go back and see."

They turned back, almost colliding with Sonia, who was entering, Casca directly behind her.

"Oh, Mme. Sadowa," asked Natalie, "you haven't seen anything of a white ivory fan? I've looked everywhere, and—"

"No," replied the widow; "but I'll look in this room if you haven't made a thorough search here already."

Natalie, thanking her, hurried back with her cavalier to the stairway. Sonia idly began her search, but Casca interrupted her.

"That can wait," he pleaded, "but I cannot. Won't you hear me?"

"Certainly," assented Sonia cheerfully. "You are going to propose, aren't you?"

"Ah, you read my secret!"

"It required little cleverness. You men are all alike."

As the discomfited marquis made his way wrathfully from the room Sonia mischievously crept across to the couch. There lay the man, sound asleep, his face still covered by the handkerchief. Sonia touched his hair.

"Scat!" roared Danilo, giving his head a shake that let the handkerchief fall from his face.

"Danilo!" gasped the widow, starting back.

At sound of his name the prince sat up, dazed and blinking. His wandering eyes fell on the woman, and, with an exclamation of utter amazement, he stumbled to his feet and stood staring incredulously at her.

"Sonia!" he exclaimed. "Sonia!"

Then, recovering himself, he bowed stiffly and said:

"I beg your pardon, madame."

"No; I beg yours," she replied.

"Pray go on snoring."

"You don't remember me?" he asked, surprised.

"Not in the very least," she answered, moving away.

"Yet you called my name."

"You were asleep then. That was different."

"And now I am awake—to the joy of seeing you again."

"The joy is all your own. Is it so surprising to find me in Paris? I am here enjoying my wealth—and freedom!"

"I congratulate you on both, especially the freedom."

"Yes, freedom is one of your fads, I believe," remarked Sonia, "especially freedom from marriage. Do you still make a habit of avoiding marriage—at the last moment?"

"Sonia, you are unjust. If it had rested with me you should be my wife now, not another man's widow."

"If it rested with you?" she mimicked. "Well, let the whole story rest now. It's forgotten."

"By you, perhaps—never by me."

"Oh, no! I remember it every now and then for my own amusement. But it is hard to think of myself as the little Marsavian peasant maid to whom the dashing cavalry officer, Prince Danilo, was once engaged and whom his rich old uncle at the last moment forbade to marry because of her poverty. How differently that same rich old uncle would look on the match today! Twenty millions is a pretty dowry."

"At least it seems you didn't break your heart over losing me," sneered Danilo.

"No; my plebeian heart stood the shock excellently. I soon found consolation—an elderly husband who lived just one week after the wedding and left me all his wealth."

"Yes; I heard how your father forced you into the match. Next time you can choose a husband to suit yourself."

WAS TAKEN SICK FROM CATCHING COLD PE-RU-NA RELIEVED.

MISS ERNESTINE BOUVARD, Duck Lake, Saskatchewan, Can., writes:

"At the close of 1903 I took sick as the result of catching cold. I became very weak and could not do anything.

"I consulted a doctor who had me take various kinds of medicine, but I did not find any relief from my suffering. At the advice of a friend, I wrote to you and you advised me.

"After I had taken two bottles of Peruna there was noticeable improvement. I combined the use of Peruna, Manalin and Laeupia and after taking several bottles of each I find myself entirely cured.

"I can certify that it was through your medicines that I recovered my health. I advise every one who is similarly afflicted to obtain Dr. Hartman's advice and be benefited."

Mrs. Wilda Mooers, R. F. D. No. 1, Lents, Oregon, writes:

"For the past four years I was a wretched woman, suffering with severe backaches and other pains, leaving me so weak and weary that it was only with difficulty that I was able to attend to my household duties.

"I used different remedies, but found no relief until I had tried Peruna.

"Within two weeks there was a change for the better, and in less than three months I was a well and happy woman.

"All the praise is due to Peruna."

Peruna is not a local remedy, but an internal systemic remedy. It will relieve catarrh in its most obnoxious form.

The Devil's Advocate.

In connection with the Roman Catholic ceremony of canonization there is an official called "the devil's advocate." When the church is ready to proceed with the steps preliminary to the canonization, an able man is appointed to assail the memory of the candidate and to bring against him all possible charges, which the other side must satisfactorily dispose of. This accuser is known as the "devil's advocate," and not until he is silenced by the disproof of his charges can the canonization be accomplished.

They Own the Soft Impeachment.

In an address to the Canadian club in Montreal, Mr. James Bryce said "I do not think it would be advisable for me to say much, for I have the good fortune to be a Scotchman myself. I won't pursue the theme of what contributions Scotchmen should be able to make to Canada's literature and science, for the very simple reason which was given by a friend of mine, who said, 'I never argue with Scotchmen that they are a great nation—they admit it.'"

Plays and Players.

Clyde Fitch's play "The Truth" was performed lately in Hamburg, Germany.

Grace George next season will have plays by both Jerome K. Jerome and Clyde Fitch.

Cecilia Loftus will have a three act play next season into which her imitations will enter.

Ada Dwyer, now playing in "Nurse Marjorie," has been selected by Lieber & Co. to play the role of Mrs. Wiggs in Australia.

Paul Armstrong is writing a one act sketch for the use of the Naval academy cadets at their amateur dramatic entertainment.

him. Again his eyes tore themselves free from the pleading seductiveness of hers as he reiterated:

"I promise! I'm not going to make a fool of myself or be made a fool of."

"Is that a declaration of war?" queried Sonia.

"No—of friendship. Do you mean to say if I asked you to be my wife you would merely laugh at me?"

"Probably. All men are alike."

"They are not, and in time I'll prove it to you."

Before she could answer the ambassador and several of the guests came into the room. At first opportunity Popoff drew Danilo aside.

"Prince," said he impressively, "you have now been attached to this legation nearly four months and"—

"Few of my attachments last so long," observed Danilo.

"You refer to your love affairs? I have heard of them. They have brought you to the brink of ruin. You are almost penniless. Here is my plan to save you, also to give you a chance to save your country from bankruptcy. I want you to marry."

"To what?" cried Danilo.

"To marry—beautiful woman, my boy—twenty millions—Mme. Sonia Sadova! Hey?"

"Never!" returned Danilo, angrily, as he rose to end the interview.

"Then a Frenchman will marry her, and her fortune and our country will be ruined."

"I won't marry her," repeated Danilo, "and she won't marry me. But for my country's sake I'll keep any Frenchman from marrying her."

"But how?"

"You shall see!"

A SURGICAL OPERATION

If there is any one thing that a woman dreads more than another it is a surgical operation.

We can state without fear of a contradiction that there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of operations performed upon women in our hospitals which are entirely unnecessary and many have been avoided by

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letter.

Mrs. Letitia Blair, Cannifton, Ont., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was sick for five years. One doctor told me it was ulceration, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor, and advised an operation. No one knows what I suffered, and the bearing down pains were terrible.

"I wrote to my sister about it, and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"It has cured me of all my troubles, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me to pass safely through Change of Life."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and backache.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course, full health will not immediately return. The gain, however, will surely. And best of all, you will realize and feel your strength and ambition as it is returning. Outside influences depress first the "inside nerves" then the stomach, Heart, and Kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by—ALL DEALERS.

Cost of Courtesy.

The adage "Courtesy costs nothing" would if true offer sufficient reason to insure its observance by practical every member of the commercial community, it being fairly obvious to most of us that courtesy is an excellent lubricant for the machinery in business. To be always courteous in business, however, requires a very considerable expenditure of mental effort which very few of us are capable of sustaining at all times.—Magazine of Commerce.

BLOOD DISEASES CURED

Drs. K. & K. Established 20 Years.

BEFORE TREATMENT

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT

He was surprised at how the sores healed. "I took your NEW METHOD TREATMENT for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted dozens of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicine the symptoms would break out again, running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, stiffness of the joints, swellings of the glands, patches of the hands, scaling, itching of the skin, dyspeptic stomach."

AFTER TREATMENT

After what had given me in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago, I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks, time the sores commenced to heal up, a little scabbing, oozing. I continued the NEW METHOD TREATMENT for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 4 years ago and no more of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can not avoid your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish."

Advice to Correspondents

An Ugly Double Chin

SUBSCRIBER — To help reduce a double chin, practice the following exercise: 1. Stand erect, in military position. Place the hands lightly on the hips, fingers forward. Drop the chin slowly on the collarbone; then throw the head back with a quick, even movement that is not a jerk, but yet puts all the muscles into quick play. Repeat ten times. 2. Turn the head quickly to the right till the chin is just over the right shoulder; then back again. Repeat ten times; then turn the head to the left in the same way. Repeat ten times. Do not tire the muscles of the neck, but gradually increase the number of exercises daily, until you can practice each one about fifty times without after-discomfort.

Some Very Good Depilatories

WORRIED—Any one of these recipes will make up into a helpful depilatory: Sulphide of soda, 150 grains; slaked lime, eighty grains; starch, twenty grains; lime-water, four fluid drams.

Barium sulphide is also used as a paste for depilatories. The standard formula is: Barium sulphide, eighty grains; powdered chalk, 400 grains. Mix with water. The barium sulphide must be absolutely dry to be effective when it is mixed with the chalk. Enough water should be afterward added to make a thin paste.

Sulphide of antimony makes also an efficient depilatory. It is made as follows: Sulphide of antimony, two drams; oxide of zinc, three drams; powdered starch, three drams.

To Remove Moles

UGLY DUCKLING—I advise you to go to a specialist to have the moles removed. However, if they are not of a very great size, I think you would be wise to let them alone, for, undoubtedly, the operation of removing them will leave a scar, anyway.

To Take Away Tan and Freckles

C. C.—There are several simple remedies which you may use to restore your complexion to its fairness.

Bathe your face at night with an infusion (cold) of fresh cucumbers sliced in milk. Buttermilk, too, is very good if applied to the face several times a day.

Good results may be obtained from the use of a mixture of lemon juice and glycerine, equal parts. If your skin will not stand glycerine, use rosewater instead.

TO many people the fear of poisoning is the curse of the summer time. To these unfortunates the country has no charms, for behind any tree or bush may lurk their enemy, poison ivy—called in the South, "oak."

To add to their terror, tradition has it that, once poisoned, the skin becomes irritated in the same way, at the same season, for three successive years. Whether this is a superstition or not 'tis hard to say; but certain it is that I knew a child whom strawberry leaves poisoned, and although, once being caught, she thereafter carefully avoided the strawberry patch, for three years the eruption of the skin returned at strawberry season.

To some the irritation caused by poison ivy is not painful; to others the suffering is acute. All that can be done is to take the inflammation away, and for this there are several remedies.

The one most commonly used is lead-water or sugar of lead, the latter being powder. Lead-water is applied hot or cold with absorbent cotton, though it is said that it is best when heated. If it reddens the skin, cold cream may be later applied.

Sugar of lead may be mixed with the cold cream, thus forming a salve. This is put on the poisoned skin with a bit of absorbent cotton or a paint brush, and it stays in place.

Grindella is a remedy intended specially for poison. It is the pure essence of an herb, and it is said to bring immediate relief, while a complete cure is effected after three or four applications.

When applying any remedy for ivy or other poison never touch the affected part with the hand, else it will spread. Liquids may be put on with a fine camel's-hair brush or with absorbent cotton. The latter should be burned after using. The brush must be disinfected at once.

If the hands are poisoned, relief may be obtained by holding them in a small receptacle—a finger bowl, for instance—partially filled with either grindella, if procurable, or lead-water. Any other part of the body may be frequently bathed in either remedy, and at night the salve may be applied.

When poisoned it is well to wear gloves at night to keep the hands from coming in contact with or further irritating the poison. Otherwise the irresistible impulse to scratch will retard the recovery.

Some people hold that a ring of sugar of lead and cold cream painted round Sulphide of strontium makes also an efficient depilatory. It is made as follows: Sulphide of strontium, two drams; oxide of zinc, three drams; powdered starch, three drams.

Skin Food for the Hands

DANDY—Try this skin food for the hands: Cocoa butter, one ounce; oil of sweet almonds, one ounce; oxide of zinc, one dram; borax, one dram; oil of bergamot, six drops. Heat the cocoa butter and oil of almonds in a bain marie and, when thoroughly blended, add the zinc and borax; stir as it cools and add the oil of bergamot last. Rub into the hands at night.

Good for the Complexion

FAY—The following treatment for improving the complexion is found very suitable for some skins. Take half an ounce of glycerine and mix with it half a pint of orange-flower water. Add a tablespoonful of powdered borax. Wash the face with the lotion several times a day.

A Number of Questions

ROSEBUDS—The following recipe will make up into a splendid preparation for removing pimples and blackheads: Petroleum, one ounce; linolin (anhydrous), one ounce; hydrogen peroxide, one fluid ounce; acetic acid, one fluid dram.

This treatment is excellent for clearing the complexion. Rub the face over, just before washing it, with two teaspoonfuls of flowers of sulphur mixed in half a pint of new milk. This mixture should stand a little while before it is used on the face.

THE ORTHODOX ATHEIST

The Man Who Makes This Life an Empty Thing Despoils It of the Divine.

God is not in all his thoughts.—Psalms x. 4.

There are at least three kinds of atheism: that which denies the existence of any infinite and eternal spirit; that which, while affirming, with much emphasis and elaboration of detail, the existence of such a spirit, yet lives as if there were none; and that which, whether affirming or denying the fact, puts nothing of the divine into actual living.

One's intellectual conclusions as to the existence of such a God as men of the past may have been able to picture may have little importance. The fact is that, as to the specifications of the Deity as conceived by others, and particularly as pictured by the past, we must all be, if we are living thinkers, atheists.

The important thing is not whether we can all agree as to the precise details of the Deity; the important thing is whether we will see somehow the divine in our lives and somehow come to express that in our living. Many a man in all day.

Good results may be obtained from the use of a mixture of lemon juice and glycerine, equal parts. If your skin will not stand glycerine, use rosewater instead.

Recipe for the Hair

CONSTANT READER—Here is the recipe which you asked me to reprint: One-half ounce of sugar of lead, one-half ounce of lac sulphur, one-half ounce of essence of bergamot, one-half gill of alcohol, one ounce of glycerine, one-half ounce of tincture of cantharides, one-half ounce of ammonia.

Mix all in one pint of soft water. Apply to the roots of the hair, which must be clean.

The dye should never be applied if there is any irritation or abrasion of the scalp.

The best way to use any stain is to apply it to the roots of the hair with a small brush; a tooth brush will answer for the purpose. Then spread it evenly downward through the tresses with an ordinary hair brush.

This should not be applied more than once a week, as its frequent use at too brief an interval would, sooner or later, have a pernicious effect upon the scalp.

Home-Made Bay Rum

VIOLET—You will not find the recipe given below at all difficult to prepare: Oil of bay, one-half ounce; oil of orange peel, fifteen minims; oil of pimento, fifteen minims; alcohol, thirty-nine ounces. Add enough water to make sixty-four fluid ounces.

A good lotion for perspiring hands is made of the following ingredients: Boric acid, eighty grains; borax, 120 grains; salicylic acid, 150 grains; glycerine, two ounces. Rub on the hands four or five times a day. Wash the hands in warm water before applying and dry carefully. Shake well. If the glycerine is heated it will increase the solubility of the preparation.

Hair Tonic

FLORA—Use the quinine tonic, which will not darken your hair in the least. Here is the formula for it: Sulphate of quinine, one dram; rosewater, eight ounces; diluted sulphuric acid, fifteen minims; redified spirits, two ounces. Mix, then further add: Glycerine, one-quarter ounce; essence of rose or essence of ylang, five or six minims. Agitate until solution is complete. Apply to the roots every day.

COMFORT for

Washing and Drying Carefully

A SIMPLE help for tender and swollen feet is the application of vaseline. If it is rubbed well into the skin, it softens it, prevents callous places and has a generally cooling and soothing effect.

Afterward the feet may be washed in warm water—neither hot nor cold. If hot is used, it only brings all the blood to the feet, thereby making them more swollen than ever. If the feet are bathed in cold water, it so increases the circulation that the effect is much the same as when hot is employed.

This done, dry the feet carefully in all the cracks and crevices, and powder them well. It is the moisture left where the towel does not reach that causes soft corns and such annoyances.

Soft Slippers

Care of the feet is never so important as in warm weather, for then they usually swell somewhat beyond their normal size. It is therefore well, when buying shoes, to take this into consideration and get them a half size or even a size larger than one would buy in winter. Even then son the piously orthodox atheist.

The man who makes this life of ours an empty thing, who robs this world of its beauty and glory, who steals from life's song the note that the morning stars sang together, the heavenly chord, is simply he who despoils life of the divine, of its ideals, its hopes, its sublime sacrifices, who casts the cynics sneer over youth's dreams, over love's devotion.

It may make little difference whether you can agree with your neighbor in your descriptions of the divine. It would be an unfortunate thing if your idea of that infinite life and love could be so localized and stationary as to permit of satisfactory description. The thing that matters is whether to that neighbor you yourself are revealing something of the divine and the eternally good and true.

WE NEED TO PRAY

to be delivered not from intellectual atheism; that will hurt no one. We need to pray to be delivered from practical atheism, the life that denies the divine; the heart that empties itself of the high and holy by its avarice, its passion for the things that are low and debasing. We need to seek to escape the diabolic delusion of the life that acknowledges the fact of a God and yet denies his likeness in the living.

You and your neighbor might quarrel forever as to your conceptions of God, but let each one seek to express that ideal of the divine in the daily doing, and you shall find yourselves walking in the same way, bound on the same errands, and your feet shall carry you together to heaven's door as you seek the ways of the needy and the sad and suffering.

This world needs God. It never will be satisfied with pictures of that great spirit of love and life. It will know God only as we show that love and life. We might well spend less time preaching about God if only we would practice that for which our ideals of God stand. If that word means to you, as more and more it must mean to men, infinite goodness, tenderness, helpfulness, affection, then the measure of your faith in such a being and such qualities is your own projection of them into the world. It is time that we ceased to quarrel over definitions and descriptions of the divine and began to do the deeds divine.

Any one who poisons easily, on returning from a walk in the country—or wherever poison ivy grows—should always wash the face and hands in hot water. Hands first, of course. This washes away whatever poisonous substances the wind may have lodged on the sensitive skin, and many a troublesome and painful case of ivy poison may thus be avoided.

Character in Walking

WALKING is almost as common as breathing, eating and sleeping, yet there are many people who do not know how to walk. Some loiter along with a half-dead, half-alive air, while others madly rush as if but a moment of time was theirs.

Now, there is much character in a walk; it should embody energy, ambition and enterprise and at the same time grace and dignity.

To walk for health certain preparations should be made. In cold weather the clothing should be warm but not heavy. The clothing should be loose, for a tight garment restricts circulation. The skirt should be short and the shoes should be low-heeled, wide and thick soled.

Deep breathing goes hand in hand with walking, and it is a good habit to breathe rhythmically, counting the while.

To be Agreeable

THE girl who gets a grievance, who feels herself ill used, who is quite sure that nobody understands her, has a mental ailment and needs treatment.

Now, I am going to prescribe.

The best cure is action. Fill every hour of the day with interests. Acquire a hobby (many people speak slightly of a hobby, but a hobby is a great thing). Throw yourself with enthusiasm into all you do. Try to make everybody you meet happy. Forget that you yourself exist, and the first thing you know you will acquire that wholesome, happy state of mind which is the most beneficial of traits.

The Hair Pillow

FEW people know the comfort in summer of a hair pillow. Who would think of sleeping upon a feather bed in August? And yet many of us bury our heads in large, soft, feathery pillows.

Suppose you buy a dear little hair pillow—20 by 15 inches—and make for it a simple slip of linen. Lay your weary head upon this some hot night and you will dream of cooling and refreshing drinks and—possibly of icebergs.

Lesson IX. David Spares Saul's Life. Golden Text, Luke 6, 27.

Verse 17. Read verses 1-17. Saul pitches his camp with six thousand troops against David in the wilderness of Ziph. At night David and Abishai steal into the camp and take the spear and water cruse from the head of the sleeping king and retire undetected. David crosses a ravine and standing on the hill opposite upbraids Abner, Saul's commander, for his failure to protect the person of his sovereign. Saul hears him and the scene between Saul and David follows.

Saul knew David's voice—Apparently it was still night and David could not be seen. Saul might well know the voice of the minstrel whose music had dispelled his evil spirit and brought him back to life (1 Sam. 16, 23).

My son David—Under these circumstances this amounts to a term of endearment. Saul's fear on discovering the presence of an enemy within his own camp has given way to as great relief when he realizes that it is David and that he has spared his life. His thankfulness was no doubt genuine for the moment.

My Lord, O king—David's loyalty to the king has never wavered, and he still regards himself as one of Saul's retainers.

18. Wherefore—A strong, manly appeal to reason on the part of David.

What evil is in my hand—The words suggest a weapon, such as Saul has held in his hand and murderously thrown at David. David now holds this spear but not for evil against his king.

19. If it be Jehovah—If Saul's thirst for David's life was due simply to his own madness, then it must be accepted as an "evil spirit" from Jehovah.

Let him accept an offering—The ancient idea of placating God by means of gifts is here suggested. If David has wronged Jehovah, he is willing to make restitution possible.

But if it be the children of men—Saul undoubtedly had advisers whose prospects for promotion would be marred by David's good favor at court. They would not be slow to cultivate Saul's anger, and by reminders of his public threats to goad him on to destroy the young commander. David's generous alternative left no blame with Saul in any event.

Cursed—The people of the East are free with their curses and blessings and usually call upon God to witness to their fulfillment.

Go, serve other gods—These were primitive days in Israel's religion, and while Jehovah was taken as the only God for Israel, the existence of other gods for other peoples was never questioned at this time. Every victory of Israel over another nation was simply a proof that Israel's God was stronger than their god. It was the great work of the prophets to show that Jehovah was the God of the earth and that all other gods were "a vain show." Thus when David was driven as an outlaw to take service under a Phil-perfect comfort is to some people unattainable, so many little remedies may be used to help through the difficult time.

Of course, those who have corns and other ailments should visit the chiropodist, if possible. These things once cured, it is not hard to keep the feet in good condition. If it is possible, never cut the corns with a knife, for in nothing is there so much danger of blood poisoning.

After drying the feet do not wear shoes and stockings at once. Slip them into a pair of low-heeled slippers so that the air may reach the skin. Poor feet, they are always confined in not leather casings, and they surely deserve a bit of air in hot weather! Then, again, it is the surest cure for perspiring and other unpleasantnesses.

These simple little remedies are so easy and save so much discomfort that they are worth trying.

She who follows the suggestions and avoids calfskin shoes during the summer weather will find that all her aches and pains will have flown away.

and Beauty

Very Beneficial

LET a woman who has been working all the morning over the countless details of housekeeping put on her hat and go out for a brisk walk. If it is only for fifteen minutes it will do her untold good—her head will be clearer and her heart lighter.

Time thus taken is not wasted, but the best kind of an investment, as she will find she can do much more in the long run.

The Influence of Sunshine

Not half the people on earth realize how large a part sunshine can play in their lives.

Sunbaths are taken as a remedy for rheumatism and sometimes to ward off sleeplessness. Even when there is no special disease to fight, but one is just tired out after a strenuous task, a sunbath will do good work—better than any medicine you could take.

It is interesting, too, to note the difference the condition of the weather makes in our tempers. There are some, of course, who are so constituted that a wet and gloomy day is the same to them as a glorious sunny day; there are others whose good humor increases as the clouds gather, but these persons are in the minority.

For the good of ourselves and neighbors it is necessary that we look at things cheerfully and hopefully. So let us admit the sunshine into our lives—literally and figuratively.

A Beneficial Exercise

Take plenty of outdoor exercise, live in the open air as much as possible, and you will feel a different person in a very short time. At least walk to and from your work if the distance is not too great. Take a spin on your cycle or a walk these lovely summer evenings. Play games, if you have time and get the chance. The business girl has to lead a sedentary life, but she should try, as much as possible, to get a daily walk to prevent her muscles from becoming flabby and soft.

Without exercise it is impossible to properly digest your food; without fresh air you will become pale and sickly. Walking is the best and cheapest exercise in the world. It brings into play a great many muscles; it strengthens the heart; it gets rid of waste products by increasing the circulation and healthy action of the skin. Above all, it cures dyspepsia. It is better than tonics or appetizers; it makes you feel ready for meals, and helps you to digest and assimilate your food.

Don't rush at it all at once; begin gently; gradually increase the length of your walks, and you will soon find your health has improved in the process. If you come home fagged or tired, don't sit down at once to a meal; rest quietly for fifteen minutes, then you will feel ready to eat and will digest your food better for the rest.

A shot was impossible, as only patches of elephant hide were visible, so a wait was the only alternative. It was nearly an hour before there was any movement in the herd, when at length a fair sized bull moved slowly into the open. As we were three hours from the road and some six from camp I decided to take the chance offered and put a shot from my .450 behind his shoulder. There was the usual crash as the herd mowed down the valley. The animal I had fired at made off with his companions; he was soon left behind, however, and with the help of my field glasses I saw him suddenly stop and roll over.

My position was ideal for observing the movements of a herd of elephants when suddenly fired at. They all went off at top speed for about a mile, when they suddenly stopped and turned around. They then continued their retreat at a steady ambling pace. The old bull then separated from the younger members of the herd and steered a course of his own. The beast I had selected was the second best in the herd, and had a nice pair of tusks of just over eighty pounds each.

prophets to show that Jehovah was the God of the earth and that all other gods were "a vain show." Thus when David was driven as an outlaw to take service under a Philistine chief it was equivalent to a compulsory acceptance of the gods of the Philistines. So his grievance was religious as well as political—indeed, at this period the two could not be separated. Furthermore, there was a feeling in the primitive religions that every god was confined to the territory of his people. Naaman after his cleansing took back with him some of the soil of Jehovah's land that when he reached his own country he might still worship the God who had effected his cure. There is a reflection of this same feeling in this and the following verse.

20. Let not my blood fall to the earth away from the presence of Jehovah—That is, "Let me not die away from my own country."

A flea . . . a partridge—Terms expressive of his own insignificance as compared with the greatness of Saul and the importance of his matters of state.

21. Behold, I have played the fool—A very superficial sort of repentance. Saul did not seem to be capable of any such anguish of heart over his sin as was David (compare Ps. 51).

22. Behold the spear, O king—The capture of Saul's spear had a deep significance, for the spear in these warlike days was the scepter. The king was never without it. It corresponded to the headquarters flag in time of war; it was driven into the ground by the commander's head at night (1 Sam. 26. 7). When the king sat at table it was by his side (20. 23), and as he sat in council he held it in his hand (22. 6). What a trophy this would have been! David's return of the 'king's spear' was absolute proof of his sincerity in all that he had said.

24. And, behold—This speech of David's is half covenant and half prayer. He begins by making the terms of an agreement with Saul, but his closing words turn in supplication to Jehovah, "so let my life be much set by in the eyes of Jehovah, and let him deliver me out of all tribulation."

25. So David went his way—Not daring to trust himself to Saul whose moments of kindness were daily becoming more transient and infrequent.

Saul returned to his own place—That is, gave up the pursuit of David. He does not appear to have made any more attempts upon David's life.

ORIGIN OF THE FORK.

First Appeared in 1905 in Venice at Wedding-Feast.

Constantinople, in Turkey, is said to have been the place where the fork originated. In 1905 it appeared in Venice at a wedding feast, where the first to use it was a woman. It was at the wedding of Don Pietro, Oricola Argilo, son of the Doge of Venice, to a Princess of the imperial house of Byzance. She it was who, at the table, used a small gold fork to convey the food from her plate to her mouth, instead of spoons and fingers. The bridegroom, delighted at the innovation, soon had a large stock of gold forks made for his own use and that of other members of the family. The style spread, and after a few months there was not a partician in Venice who did not employ a fork at his meals.

TRAILING AN ELEPHANT HERD

Hunter's Lucky Shot in Big Game Country of Uganda.

About three days west of Masaka, which is the Government station of Buddu, the high, impenetrable grass which covers the greater portion of Uganda is left behind, and a good game country, not unlike parts of East Africa, is reached. Soon after pitching camp, after the third day's march from Masaka, we learned from a passing caravan that elephants had been heard early that morning near the road, says a writer in London Field.

The elephants were in a narrow belt of dense jungle on the right of the road; beyond the jungle a small, rock strewn hill rose abruptly to a height of 100 feet. On the left of the road was an extensive swamp, while beyond it were more rocky hills. I decided immediately to move through the belt of jungle in which the elephants were feeding, and, if possible, gain the hill and endeavor to get a view of the herd. With great difficulty we forced our way through the matted vegetation, and at length gained the hill.

The elephants, however, must have heard us, for they almost immediately filed out of the cover in which they had been feeding, and, crossing the road, moved into the swamp. We got a fine view of them as they moved away. There was one fine beast with tusks well above the average, a second with average sized tusks, and three others with only small ivory. We immediately left our hill and commenced the stern chase. We followed the herd up a valley, with high hills on either side, for about three hours; they were evidently much alarmed, and the tracks told us that they were moving at a steady pace. At length the valley divided into two.

The herd took the branch running to the left, which was well wooded and very narrow. They had evidently hesitated on arrival at this point, for the dung, which up to this time had been cold, was now found to be slightly warm. I decided that our best course was to climb the hills on our right, from which we could look down into the valley. A short climb showed us that the valley led up to a neck connecting two hills and that the neck had a clump of large trees on it.

We now moved along the side of the valley toward the wooded neck, and very soon an elephant's back was spotted below us as he moved across an open space. The sun was gaining strength, so it was evident that the elephants were in search of shade. Having ascertained the direction of the wind, we made a long detour and eventually crawled out on a spur of rock overlooking the wooded neck. The herd were huddled together among the trees,

ON A RANCH IN THE WEST

ENGLISH GIRL KEPT HOUSE FOR HER BROTHER.

Work Was Hard, Cooking a Treat, and "One Makes Such Friends in the West."

Life on the prairies of Western Canada, from an English girl's viewpoint, is described by "E.M. B." in The London Mail, as follows:

"I am heartily sick of 'baching it'!" wrote my brother, who was ranching in the Northwest of Canada. Love of adventure, and a desire to help him—we had always been chums—prompted me to go out and keep house for him.

When I made known my intentions there was a general outcry in the family. With the frankness which characterizes relations, various complimentary remarks were made concerning my domestic accomplishments. Notwithstanding, I set to work with determination. I attended a course of cookery and laundry classes, and, having got my diplomas, I considered myself admirably adapted for colonial life.

After a pleasant voyage on the Ionian I was soon rushing through the vast Dominion of Canada, past the rocky and precipitous shore of Lake Superior, through the immense forests of Ontario and the flat farm lands of Manitoba, on to the boundless, rolling prairie!

When at last we reached M— Creek, and I caught sight of my brother's stalwart form on the platform, my spirits revived. The ranch was twenty miles south of the town, and as it was then 7 p.m., it was too late to think of going out that night, so we stayed at the Royal Hotel. It was a large building, painted a bright purple, with green doors and windows.

ROUGH TRAVELING.

The drive out to the ranch on the following day was delightful. The brilliant sunshine, cloudless sky, and exhilarating air had a most buoyant effect on my spirits, and the prairie seemed much more habitable than it had appeared to me from the windows of the C. P. R. car. We drove along the "road allowance" for about eight miles, then we struck out over a prairie trail. It was uphill most of the way, and rather rough traveling, as we had so many loose stones to encounter.

My brother's ranch is in the Cypress Hills, and we had a grand view of them all the way. The country is bare of foliage, except along the creeks, where the bush is thick. We passed by several homesteads surrounded by barbed wire fences, and drove through an enormous field eight miles square. The ranch was prettily situated on rising ground by Bear Creek, and there was plenty of bush surrounding it. The house and other buildings were built of pine logs, which came from the hills close by.

I was agreeably surprised when I entered my brother's little domain, for from the outside it looked more like a large shed than a dwelling-house. But inside there were four good-sized rooms, a kitchen, a cosy sitting-room, and two bedrooms. The hired men slept in a separate shack outside. I had brought out a good supply of curtains, cushions, etc., and soon made had to be hauled in buckets from the creek.

Spring and summer are the busiest seasons both indoors and out. In May and June horses and cattle have to be rounded up, and riders were frequently dropping in for meals at all hours. Colts and calves have to be branded, and there are some exciting scenes in the corrals when a broncho is being broken in.

COLD WINTERS.

The winters are delightful. The thermometer sometimes falls to 40 degrees below zero, but this intense cold only lasts a short while at a time. The Chinook winds bring warmer weather and blow the snow away into the coulees (valleys), and the greater part of the winter it is brisk and sunny.

We had more leisure then to enjoy ourselves. Dancing was our chief amusement. We practised a series of invasions on each other which we called surprise parties, each lady bringing a basket of sandwiches and cakes for supper. There was generally a fiddler to play for us, but sometimes we had nothing else but the mouth organ to dance to. The "caller-off" stood on a form and shouted out the movement for the square dances in a sing-song rhythm.

We generally danced the clock around, for people came from a great distance, and it was not safe to venture back till daylight, as it is so easy to lose one's way on the prairie. All classes met on an equality at these social gatherings, and everyone enjoyed themselves in an informal way. Our neighbors were for the most part Canadians from "way down East," simple, kindly folk, who always gave us a hearty welcome. There were some very nice English people living not far off, with whom I became very friendly—one can make such real friends out in the West.

COMING BACK TO MARRY.

I stayed with my brother two years. I came home last autumn, and I am shortly returning to keep house for some one else! I am very glad I am not going out quite so "green" to undertake the arduous duties of married life in the Northwest.

Many English girls go out as wives to Canada with romantic ideas of roughing it on the prairie with "dear Harry." But when they come to the practical work of washing "dear Harry's" shirts and cooking his meals, the romance is apt to fade, and only a disappointing commonplace is left! Every woman who goes out to the West must make up her mind to find her sole happiness and joy in her home surroundings, and she must be both able and willing to lead a life of hard work and self-sacrifice.

CURIOUS HOTEL CUSTOMS.

Where Every Cuss Word Costs a Penny.

A curious custom prevails at an Edinburgh hotel. Whenever a customer is heard to swear he is required to place a penny in a box on the bar counter. It is not a matter for surprise that the landlord hears much less bad language than some of his fellow publicans in the capital of Scotland, says London Tit-Bits.

The following is a quaint idea for providing funds for picnics and social evenings. It is carried on

LONDON'S MATY PAUPERS

116,000 ARE IN WORKHOUSES OR OTHER INSTITUTIONS.

$35,498,975 Expended in 1907 for Poor Law Relief in England and Wales.

Over 116,000 paupers are being maintained by London boards of guardians at the present moment. Of these about 74,000 are in workhouses, infirmaries, or other institutions—2,000 more than there were this time last year.

The pressure on the available accommodation has become so great that the Local Government Board has arranged for a large number of able-bodied male paupers to be housed at Belmont Asylum, Bantstead, Surrey, belonging to the Metropolitan Asylums Board.

The organization and management of this workhouse have been entrusted by Mr. Burns to the Fulham Board of Guardians, no doubt because poor-law administration in that parish is more economical than in any other district in London. The maintenance of a workhouse inmate at Fulham costs just half what it does in some of the other unions.

Another suggestion now under consideration by the Local Government is that the Asylums Board's hospital at Carshalton, which has never yet been occupied, should be used for sick and convalescent children sent by boards of guardians. At present this institution is a white elephant.

ENGLAND'S BURDEN.

The Lord Government Board return for the half-year ended Michaelmas, 1907, shows that for England and Wales the gross expenditure on poor-law relief of all kinds (exclusive of loans and without allowing for various receipts) amounted in all to 7,099,795 pounds. Of this sum 1,919,291 was expended by London alone. Compared with the corresponding period of 1906, London comes out better than the rest of the country—possibly owing to certain energetic efforts from headquarters—for the increase is 1.7 per cent., while that for England and Wales is 2 per cent.

Still, the fact remains that the total amount expended on indoor and out relief throughout the country was higher than in any other of the nine half-years given in the return. While the population increased during the period nearly 11 per cent., the outlay on indoor paupers increased by nearly 35 per cent., and on out relief by more than 13 per cent.

Indoor pauperism has long been the feature of London's poor relief. The present return shows that per head of population the cost of maintaining this class was, in 1907, more than three times the cost per head in the aggregate of the rest of England and Wales; on the other hand, the cost of out relief, on a similar calculation, was 38 per cent. lower in London than elsewhere. The number of indoor paupers in London relieved on July 1, 1907, represented 15.7 per 1,000 of the population against 5.9 in the rest of the country. Between 1898 and 1907, however, while the cost of indoor relief rose in London by 23 per cent. the rise in the rest of the country was 42 per cent.

THE TRAGEDY OF KINGS

CROWNLESS MONARCHS AND VACANT THRONES.

Claimants to the Throne of France are as Plentiful as Blackberries.

France has a goodly crop of Royal exiles and pretenders to the throne. At Farnborough lives the ex-Empress Eugenie, a pathetic figure, reminding one very forcibly of the "tragedy of kings." First, in 1870, came the overthrow of her husband, Napoleon III., and her flight to England. Worse followed in the death of her husband and son, and to-day this unhappy Royal exile, one of the loneliest and most touching in all Europe, quietly awaits the Great Call, says London Tit-Bits.

Within a couple of hours' railway journey of Farnborough, viz., at Evesham, in Worcestershire, lives another French Royal exile, the Duc d'Orleans, chief claimant to the throne of France, whose sister, Princess Louise of France, was recently married to Prince Charles of Bourbon, and whose sister escaped so miraculously with her life at Lisbon. The Duke's great-grandfather was King Louis Philippe, the last of the line to reign in France, who signed an Act of Abdication in favor of his grandson, the Comte de Paris, father of THE PRESENT DUC D'ORLEANS.

How the Revolution changed France from a Monarchy to a Republic every schoolboy knows, and not only is the Duc thus prevented from wearing a crown, but by the Expulsion Act of 1886 he is liable to arrest and punishment if he sets his foot in France. This Act forbids the soil of that country to the direct heirs of families which have reigned there.

For this reason Prince Victor Napoleon, who claims the Bonapartist succession, and is styled Napoleon IV. by his followers, resides in Brussels. Prince Victor's father was cousin to Napoleon III., husband of the ex-Empress Eugenie. Napoleon III. died in 1873, his only son, the Prince Imperial was killed in the Zulu Campaign of 1879, and thus Joseph Charles Paul Bonaparte, father of Prince Victor, held the position of Head of the House of Bonaparte, and his son became heir of the Bonaparte hopes. But the Act of 1886 exiled them both as pretenders to the throne. Prince Victor, however—his father died in 1891—still hopes to reign in the country of his birth, and reminds his partisans at intervals of his ambition by sending them signed photographs of himself.

DOM CARLOS, DUKE OF MADRID.

And then there is the most picturesque of all claimants to the throne of France—Dom Carlos, Duke of Madrid, who considers that, by strict right of heredity, he should also be King of Spain. He claims to be Carlos VII., the rightful King of Spain and the Indies, by virtue of his descent from Dom Carlos, brother of King Ferdinand VII. of Spain (who died in 1833), and also claims to be King Charles XI. of France and Navarre, since the death of the Comte de Chambord in 1883, when the elder line of the House of Bourbon became ed more like a large shed than a dwelling-house. But inside there were four good-sized rooms, a kitchen, a cosy sitting-room, and two bedrooms. The hired men slept in a separate shack outside. I had brought out a good supply of curtains, cushions, etc., and soon made it look quite homelike. There was plenty to do. I had to cook, wash, and do the housework for my brother and his two hired men.

PLENTY TO LEARN.

In spite of my diplomas, I found I had a great deal more to learn. I worked hard from morning till night. Then a good Samaritan, who had caught me one afternoon in a chaos of confusion, invited me to spend a week with her, and I left my brother to "bach" it once again. The rapidity with which my kind Canadian friend got through her work amazed me. By two o'clock all was done, and we had the afternoon to enjoy ourselves. I kept my eyes open, learned Canadian methods, and returned home to find, after many failures, that an English girl can succeed in the Northwest.

I soon began to take a great delight in my work, and I found it took a considerable amount of brain to make a good housekeeper. Cooking was quite a treat; we always burnt wood, which is much cleaner than coal. There were no heavy iron saucepans to lift, as the cooking utensils were made of granite.

BREAD SOON DISAPPEARED

I found it rather a hard matter to keep the breadpan well supplied, as a batch of loaves did not last long. Sometimes visitors would arrive when we were reduced to one loaf, and then I had to make "biscuits" (scones) to make it hold out. We had three substantial meals a day, meat and potatoes at each. Breakfast at 7 a.m., dinner at 12 p.m., supper at 6 p.m., which we partook of all together in the kitchen. It is the custom in that part of Canada to eat with the hired men. They are often gentlemen, and sometimes "Jack" is better than his master!

We killed our own beef, salting it in the summer, and in the winter it kept good frozen. Our larder was also kept well replenished in season with game—wild duck, prairie chicken, rabbits, and occasionally antelope. Raspberries, gooseberries, blue berries and saskatous (a small dark red berry) grow wild in abundance. I learned the Canadian method of preserving them in syrup. "Sealers" are most useful for bottling fruit; they are glass jars with glass tops and rubber bands screwed down tightly with zinc rings.

We ate the fruit out of little saucers made especially for the purpose, and it made delicious "pie," which the Canadians can make to perfection.

HOUSEKEEPING METHODS.

All the floors, including the kitchen, were painted, and they were easily washed over; the tables were covered with white oilcloth, which saved scouring, so a certain amount of labor was saved. Even washing clothes was not such a task to be dreaded after all, as a washboard, wringer and a large copper boiler which fitted on the cook stove simplified matters not a little. It was a "chore" boy's work to light the fire in the morning, keep the wood box filled, and provide the house with water, which lord hears much less bad language than some of his fellow publicans in the capital of Scotland, says London Tit-Bits.

The following is a quaint idea for providing funds for picnics and social evenings. It is carried on with much success at an Ashton-Mersey inn. A "knocking club" is connected with the inn, and when a customer calls for refreshment he is expected to knock on the table or counter before drinking. If he fails to do this he is fined one penny. Any one who wrongfully accuses another of breaking this unique rule is also fined. The money thus obtained provides funds for many enjoyable outings and pleasant evenings during the course of the year.

At another hotel, known as the Old Hundred, customers are allowed only one drink. If one is not sufficient to quench their thirst they are obliged to go out of the hotel and take a walk before they are allowed to have another.

Till recently the proprietor of an old time hotel in Warwickshire used to invite all his customers to accompany him and his wife to the service at the parish church on Sunday mornings, which was situated on the opposite side of the road, the house being closed while they were away. On returning each customer was invited to partake of refreshments offered by the hospitable landlord free of charge.

Visitors to a certain hotel in Aberdeenshire who wear brown boots must remember to keep them in their room overnight. Otherwise the boots will be blacked, regardless of the original color of the same. In one of the rooms of a Dumfries public house is an old armchair which is said to have been frequently used by the poet Burns. All who sit in this chair are expected to treat every one who is in the room at the time and often the immortal memory of the famous Scottish national poet is drunk.

A small hotel in Wales until quite recently was used by the Catholics as a place of worship on Sundays, and police court proceedings were held on the premises during the week.

PROFITABLE LITIGATION.

On the boundary-line of two farms in an Austrian village there is a large gooseberry bush, from which two farmers have for years gathered the product. "What grows on my side is mine, and you may have the rest," was the agreement. Three years ago the neighbors had a misunderstanding, and this came to a climax when the gooseberries became ripe. A lawsuit followed, and appeals were made to higher judicial bodies. The final decision has just been recorded in an Austrian paper. Each party is to have the right to pick the berries which grow on his side of the line, just as it was originally, but neither may destroy the bush. The costs are charged half to each litigant. Each farmer had to pay two hundred and twenty-five krone. The yearly yield of the bush is worth about one-half krone, and the judge told the fighting farmers: "With good luck, it will take you only eight hundred years to make the bush pay. Take good care of it!"

Children come into the world heavily handicapped because they are not permitted to select their own parents.

lation against 5.9 in the rest of the country. Between 1898 and 1907, however, while the cost of indoor relief rose in London by 23 per cent. the rise in the rest of the country was 42 per cent.

ELECTRIFIED WHEAT.

What Sir Oliver Lodge is Doing to Increase the Yield.

The eminent scientist, Sir Oliver Lodge, has written an explanation of the statements which have been made about his process of electrifying wheat. A Swedish professor, thirty years ago, made some experiments trying to explain the Aurora Borealis by imitating its appearance. He produced high tension discharges and sent them through vacuum tubes. Some of these experiments were conducted in a greenhouse and the professor noticed incidentally that the plants seemed to thrive exceptionally under the treatment. Lately two English gentlemen wished to conduct similar experiments with the idea of affecting the growth of plants and they asked the assistance of Sir Oliver Lodge. His system has been to stretch over fields with crops to be treated a number of wires on poles, about fifteen feet high. The wires are supported on the poles by elaborate high-tension insulators and are connected with a generator which supplies positive electricity at a potentiality of something like a hundred thousand volts. Leakage occurs immediately and the charge fizz off the wires with a sound which is sometimes audible, and with a glow which is visible in the dark. Anyone walking underneath the wires can feel the effect on the hair as of a cobweb on the face. As compared with a neighboring unelectrified plot, the yield of red wheat is increased by 40 per cent. and white wheat by 30 per cent. The electrified wheat produces better flour. The straw in an electrified plot is from 4 to 6 inches higher. Similar results have been obtained with fruit and vegetables.

GROUSE SHOOTING.

Prices Paid in Great Britain for Bringing Down a Few Birds.

The large prices that are being paid this year for moors promise to make the luxury of grouse shooting more costly than usual—and at its lowest it is sufficiently expensive, says the Westminster Gazette.

According to Mr. Teasdale-Buckell £1 is a fair average cost of a brace of grouse, although the cost may in a bad year run as high as five times this sum. To illustrate the range of costliness Mr. Buckell says that he has known £500 paid for 20,000 acres in Perthshire, the bag amounting to 150 brace, which took four guns a month to get, while £150 has secured a moor of 2,000 acres, on which 100 brace could easily have been killed by one good gun in a day.

It is interesting to note that grouse driving in the north of England is much cheaper than grouse shooting north of the Tweed. In Yorkshire and Durham 10s. a brace is near the mark—roughly, half the cost of birds in Scotland—and 7s. 6d. a brace is by no means uncommon.

Contentment is said to be better than riches, but it is only a matter of hearsay with most people.

by virtue of his descent from Dom Carlos, brother of King Ferdinand VII. of Spain (who died in 1833), and also claims to be King Charles XI. of France and Navarre, since the death of the Comte de Chambord in 1883, when the elder line of the House of Bourbon became extinct. On account of the latter claim he has been expelled from France, and of late years has not pursued his claim to the throne of Spain quite so actively as he did in the 'seventies, when, after a strenuous campaign, the Government managed to dislodge his adherents from their strongholds in the north of the country. Like the Duc d'Orleans, Dom Carlos is very rich, and it is said that he hopes, through his son, Dom Jaime, who is an officer in the Russian army, to yet gain those Royal rights which are said to belong to his family.

France is also responsible for the throneless later years of two other derelicts of Royalty—Ranavalona, formerly and Behazin, one time King of Dahomey. Both these exiles are State prisoners of France, the latter having been deposed because he developed a habit of making war indiscriminately on all about him; while Ranavalona was deprived of her rule of Madagascar because she and her people at first refused to bow to the power of France.

Living quietly with his large family, dividing their time between Nice and Cannes, are the Count and Countess Caserta, claimants to the defunct throne of Naples and the Two Sicilies. At one time this kingdom embraced Sicily and Southern Italy, which were incorporated in the new kingdom of Italy in 1860-61. It is a curious fact that the Count was, in his youth, chief of staff to Dom Carlos, and in that character was condemned to be shot by the Government.

In Paris lives Queen Natalie of Servia, mother of the murdered King Alexander, who, after her divorce from King Milan, took up her residence in the French capital; while near by lives Prince Guy de Lusignan, who claims to be King of Armenia, Cyprus, and Jerusalem. He traces his descent from that famous knight, Guy de Lusignan, who became

KING OF JERUSALEM IN 1186.

There is little likelihood of the Prince "coming into his own," but in the meantime he has designed two attractive decorations, the Order of Mount Sinai and the Order of St. Melusine, which he confers with much solemnity upon persons of whose merit he approves.

The Princess Eugenie Cristoforos is another claimant to a throne with a particularly long pedigree. She traces it back to the Emperor Constantine, and her father, Prince Theodore, was a candidate for the throne of Greece in 1863, when the Powers selected Prince George of Denmark.

Portugal, too, has its pretenders in Don Miguel II., whose father fought unavailingly for the Crown early in the last century. The Crown is also claimed by Prince Pedro d'Alcantara, who considers that he is also the rightful Emperor of Brazil.

The average man is willing to let his wife have the last word—and the sooner she gets around to it the better he seems to like it.

THE RUSSIAN PEASANT

AWFUL IGNORANCE OF THESE POOR PEOPLE.

Always Poor and Generally in Debt
—Is the Land of the Czar Doomed.

The population of Russia to-day is estimated in round figures at 147,000,000 persons. Of this number 100,000,000 are peasants, and they lag so far behind the times in regard to education, manners, customs, and general enlightenment that they have been compared to the medieval German peasant of the fourteenth century. Indeed, so ignorant are they that a young man who can read is regarded by them as a wonder. They believe in witches, demons, and wood-devils, and live under such conditions that in ordinary times in the Russian villages 50 per cent. of the children from birth to five years die, and 350 to 400 per 1,000 of those from birth to one year. Truly an awful rate of infant mortality!

Is it surprising that people ask, Is Russia doomed? or that the country should have been so soundly beaten in warfare by the enterprising Japs?

As a matter of fact, the Russian peasant does not live—he merely exists. "Nitchévo" ("It is nothing"), he merely says, when anything happens to him. Nothing matters, nothing could be worse, and "Nitchévo" is

HIS PANACEA FOR ALL EVILS.

And yet the Russian moujik is really a fine fellow. Ordinarily, Mr. H. F. Kennard tells us in his book, "The Russian Peasant," he is a splendid, well-built man, large limbed, large-headed and healthy. He is equally unaffected by 20 degrees of frost or twenty glasses of vodka. He is clothed in uncured sheepskins, and carries in winter more clothes than the average Englishman could stand up in.

He is unspeakably stupid, however, and his dream of happiness is to gorge, to sleep as much as possible through the winter, and dance and sing in the summer. But the stranger's first objection to the moujik is that he smells—not because he does not wash himself. As a matter of fact, in every village there are public baths—baaza—and the peasants wash themselves there unflinchingly every Saturday in order to be allowed to go to church on Sunday; for the Orthodox Church enjoins cleanliness.

HOW HE LIVES.

The moujik, however, apparently thinks that he has done all that is required of him by the church if he washes himself; for, according to Mr. Kennard, you can smell his izba, or hut, long before you reach it. As a rule, there are two rooms to an izba, a living-room and an outhouse, and, while the former is usually clean and whitewashed, the latter is fearfully dirty. Moreover, his uncured sheepskins do not give off the most pleasant of odors, and when, as during the Russian famine of 1906-7, three or four families combine, and live in the best hut, pulling down the others in order to use the timber for fuel and the thatch as forage for horses and cattle, it will be readily understood that the odor of that particular izba was not generally improved.

CARGO OF MILLIONAIRES

BIG LINER CARRIED A VALUABLE LOAD.

Interesting Facts Giving an Idea of the Enormity of a Floating Monster.

When the Adriatic anchored at Southampton, England, last week and landed most of her passengers the officers of the White Star Line breathed easier. But when she went on to Cherbourg, France, and put the rest of them ashore in safety, all hands from the president of the company down were thankful.

They had delivered in good condition the most valuable cargo that ever a ship took across the seas—$200,000,000 in American millionaires, representing $2,000,000,000 in invested capital.

Each and every millionaire was delivered ashore without damage save to his pocket. Of course, passage on the big Adriatic costs real money, and not one of the millionaires escaped for less than $500, while some paid from $1,000 to $2,500 for the trip across the "pond."

It was an inspiring sight just before the big ship sailed from New York. The main companionway was jammed with bank presidents, directors of railways, brokers, merchants, lawyers and others who have the interests of capital at heart. After the wealthy passengers were aboard they received messages of importance until the word was passed aft to cast off. Custom house agents were around to see that all the laws were observed. Had the millionaires aboard taken all their money with them the ship would not have been allowed to sail under the United States registry laws.

NOTHING TOO GOOD.

Nearly all of the millionaires were accompanied by their families, and they had the pick of the big ship's accommodations, which really meant that they were the star boarders in a floating hotel of the Waldorf-St. Regis-Plaza class. In a word, there was nothing too good for them.

The crew, the food, the drink that is necessary for such an important cargo presents a latter-day problem. To the layman it would be stupendous.

And what sort of ships do people use who can pay the price in these twentieth century days?

The Adriatic is a typical ship of the kind. She isn't built for speed, but she gets there regularly, no matter what the weather. Imagine the Waldorf-Astoria hotel at sea, and you have the Adriatic.

She is 725 feet 9 inches over all—three blocks long. Her beam is 75 feet 6 inches, and her moulded depth about 50 feet, or about the height of a city house of four storeys. She has 15,000 horse power, and she can steam eighteen knots an hour without trouble. The cost was $3,700,000.

A FLOATING HOTEL.

This great floating hotel which carried the cargo of millionaires has nine decks, and when she has her full complement of passengers and crew she has 3,000 persons on board—three regiments—a whole brigade! To cross the Atlantic she Interesting Gossip About Some of the World's Prominent People.

Lord Wolsley makes no secret of the fact that he is extremely superstitious—indeed, he once owned, in a letter to the members of the Thirteen Club, that while in Ireland he had worn out several hat brims through saluting single magpies, and that he would not "on any account" walk under a ladder. He also believes in ghosts, and can tell some exceedingly strange stories of regimental spectres.

Prince Ernst, son of the reigning Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, is not only an enthusiastic artist, but he has started a school for students in Meiningen, where he has his studio, and devotes the whole of the money which he receives for his own paintings to the upkeep of that school. One of the Prince's latest pictures is a magnificent fresco for the University of Jena, representing the Elector John Frederick on horseback. The Prince is one of the simplest of men, a thorough Bohemian, with a liking for visiting the artist colonies of Rome and Paris, where he is well known.

Like most autocrats, the Sultan of Turkey goes about in hourly fear of assassination, and it is on this account that he will never sleep in the dark. His constant dread of death has made him a prey to insomnias, and he does not often sleep for more than three or four hours at a time. It is said to cost him nearly $1,000 a night to have his bedroom guarded, for the attendants entrusted with this important mission are all tried retainers who receive princely salaries for their work. Many are the rules adopted by the Sultan to escape from would-be assassins. In one of the antechambers leading to his private apartments is placed a life-sized figure of His Majesty, for the purpose of misleading any prowling revolutionary who might happen to penetrate thus far.

Many princesses and other ladies of the Royal houses of Europe would be capable of earning good incomes as skilled workers were they suddenly deprived of their rank and wealth. Princess Hermine of Reuss, for instance, is a skilled watchmaker, and has frequently shown her work at various German exhibitions. Then again, a well-known Stuttgart company have taken up and patented more than one of the inventions of the Duchess Philip of Wurtemberg, who has the curious hobby of making special surgical bandages, elastic stockings, and supports. Perhaps the most curious Royal hobby of all however, is that of the Archduchess Friedrick of Austria, who makes beautifully-scented wax candles, which she moulds and prepares with her own fingers.

The most curious collection of boots, shoes, and slippers is stated to be in the possession of an Englishman, Mr. Roach Smith. Besides specimens of every successive age, beginning with the boots of a bishop in 721 A.D., he has several to which an historic or romantic interest is attached—e.g., the shoes of most of the beauties of Charles II.'s Court, including the Duchess of Cleveland, the Countess of Muskerry, and la-belle Hamilton (afterwards Comtesse de Grammont), with those of Miss Jennings and Miss Stewart (the original of the Britannia on the guinea), stolen, according to the labels, by Ro-

Barbara Tasson, restaurateur, Yeith, has been fined $35 for selling half water and half milk.

The surplus from the Scottish Children's League of Pity pageant is expected to amount to fully $5,000.

The dredger Esk has commenced dredging Buckle Harbor, and one day recently took 200 tons silt out to sea.

It is just one hundred years ago since the foundation stone of the Bell Rock Lighthouse, off Arbroath, was laid.

The value of crabs landed this season between Cove and Dumbur is $114,275, an increase of $4,575 over last year.

The Senegalese at the Edinburgh Exhibition are fast learning the English language, and can sing two Scottish songs.

Gifford is becoming more popular every year as a picnic resort, and already this year many parties visited the district.

Some Portobello or Leith dogs have gone in for sheep worrying on the Craiginny golf course, and several mangled are among the results.

Upper Ward farmers think the present season will be one of the finest that has been experienced for many years, so far as crops are concerned.

For the first time in its history the Cheshire Rifle Association has elected a lady president in the person of Miss Catherine King, daughter of Colonel King.

At Burnbank the six-year-old son of Donald Cameron fell in returning with a jug of milk. Part of the broken jug severed his jugular vein and he bled to death.

A live tortoise has been picked up on the beach at Berwick. Inquiries in the neighborhood have failed to find an owner, and how it came to be there is a mystery.

The Secretary for Scotland has appointed a Departmental Committee to inquire into the methods of breeding and keeping poultry in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland.

On opening a parcel from Glasgow containing a hat the other day a Musselburgh man found inside £150 in gold coins belonging to a bank. Query—How did they get there?

HE DIDN'T WORRY.

The Working Out of Hezekiah Doolittle's Theory of Hopefulness.

His name was Hezekiah Doolittle and he was blessed with a sanguine temperament. When he proposed to Annie Warner she inquired what means he had with which to support a wife. "None whatever,"

s, when, as during the Russian famm d ine of 1906-7, three or four families
d combine, and live in the best hut, s pulling down the others in order to s use the timber for fuel and the s thatch as forage for horses and cat-ie tie, it will be readily understood ie that the odor of that particular izr ba was not generally improved.

The Russian peasant is always m poor, and generally in debt. He d ploughs the land in the same way f that his father ploughed it, and d gets as little for his labor. His n main worry in life is how to pay n the Governor's taxes. If he says he y cannot pay he is flogged; or per-y haps he will sell part of his next s year's power of work (i.e., work s for nothing for several months) to s raise a loan; and, of course, he is s worse off than ever the following s year.

The moujik's festivals to-day are s the same as those of a century or s so ago. Here is a description of e one. It will show the extraordie nary mumery practised in connect, tion with marriage, although, at the s same time, the description contains s a very good hint to bold and daring
s spinsters in this leap year of 1908.

ON CHRISTMAS NIGHT

at dusk the marriageable village s girls go out into the streets and s meet their young men, and one s says, "What is your name?" The s young man answers, "Foma," and s she replies, "My husband's name is s Foma."

Some days later, at the girl's s home, relations are gathered tos gether; there comes a knock at the s door, the starosta and the young s man enter carrying loaves of bread.
s The starosta says something like s this:—

"We are German people, come s from Turkey. We are hunters, s good fellows. There was a time s once in our country when we saw s strange footprints in the snow, and s my friend the prince here saw s them, and we thought they might s be fox's or marten's footprints, or s it might be those of a beautiful girl. s We hunters, we good fellows are s determined not to rest till we have s found the animal. We have been in s all cities from Germany to Turkey s and have sought for this fox, this s marten, or this princess, and at s last we have seen the same strange s footprints in the snow again, here s by our Court. And we have come s in. Come let us take her, the beau-s tiful princess, for we see her in s front of us—or can it be you would s keep her till she grows a little older?"

Thus does the moujik ask for a s wife.—London Tit-Bits.

HOW EMPEROR WILLIAM RESTS.

It seems that the German Empers or is in the habit of having a slight s meal every two hours. His incesss ant activity makes this necessary, s and his example is followed by s most of his suite, who would others wise be unable to do all that is des manded of them. The Empress als so, when the Emperor is "on para-s de," has frequent refreshment s during the day. The Kaiser also s keeps two hours of the day, when s possible, to rest; from 2 to 4 o'clock s he is not to be disturbed when at s home. Otherwise he is the entire s day occupied either with business s or pleasure. He retires to rest late s and is up again the next morning s at 5 o'clock.

Nothing makes a woman feel so s little as the refusal of a man to

A FLOATING HOTEL.

This great floating hotel which s carried the cargo of millionaires has s nine decks, and when she has her s full complement of passengers and s crew she has 3,000 persons on s board—three regiments—a whole s brigade! To cross the Atlantic she s burns 3,000 tons of coal.

Her crew consists of 456 men.
s They work in shifts, and there is s always a sufficient relay of men to s stoke the boilers, mind the engines s and care for the great number of s passengers, high and low, rich and s poor, which the law allows her to s carry.

The big steamship has elevators
s to carry passengers from one deck s to another, a gymnasium, a Turks ish bath, as well as a plunge and s swimming pool; electric baths and s massage and manicure rooms; arti-
s ficial ice machines, a restaurant s conducted on the European plan, s where the passengers may have so s much deducted from the price of s his passage if he doesn't take his s meals in the regular dining-rooms;
s telephones, a photographic dark s room, a tennis court, golf links and s shuffleboards. Wireless telegraphy s keeps the great ship in communis cation with the world at all times.

THE FEEDING PROBLEM.

The problem of feeding these 3-s 000 persons who travel on the Adris atic in the high tide of summer traf-s fic is a serious one. It takes 250
s persons alone to prepare and serve s the food for the passengers and s crew.

For a single trip there is required
s 32,000 pounds of beef, mutton, s lamb, pork and veal; 7,500 pounds
s of game and poultry; 3,500 pounds
s of fresh fish; 600 pounds of smoked
s fish; 8,000 pounds of fruit; 3 s dozen eggs; 12,000 pounds of bread;
s five tons of assorted vegetables;
s 15,000 quarts of beer and 2,000
s quarts of champagne; 1,000 bottles
s of whiskey, gin and rum, and 500
s gallons of ice cream. There are als ways 1,000 cases of condensed milk s aboard, but 1,000 gallons of fresh s milk are used before this is touched.
s All sorts of minor supplies are cars ried in great bulk, everything being s provided with the idea that in s case of emergency the entire ship's s company may have to be fed for

EUROPEAN TRAVEL.

This has been a big year for Eus ropean travel, despite the rather s hard times. In 1905 88,367 firsts class passengers sailed for Europe
s from New York. In 1906 the num-s ber was increased to 93,083. Last s year it was 100,286. This year's s figures cannot be made up until the s season closes. Averaging the entire s year, more than 2,000 persons sail s for Europe every week. In the rush
s weeks of summer there may be 7, s 000 persons traveling by the several s lines. In the dead cold weeks of s winter the number may drop to s 500, but all the year around 100, s 000 persons take first-class passage s to Europe, to say nothing of the ads ded hundreds of thousands who sail s by the steerage route.

LIKELY.

"Now," said the teacher, who s had been discussing the habits of s bears, "what is the fiercest animal s in the Polar regions, Johnnie?"
s "Why—er—er," stammered
s Johnnie.
s "Come, don't you remember?
s The pol—" "Oh, sure! The pole cat."

shoes of most of the beauties of s Charles II.'s Court, including the s Duchess of Cleveland, the Countess
s of Muskerry, and la-belle Hamilton
s (afterwards Contesse de Grams mont), with those of Miss Jennings s and Miss Stewart (the original of s the Britannia on the guinea), stol-s en, according to the labels, by Ros chester and Killigrew. There is an s entire compartment devoted to s some of the shoes crowned by the s Societe des Petits Pieds, over which s the member with the smallest foot
s presided till she was displaced.

The news that a son of Prince s Hohenlohe, ex-Chancellor of the s German Empire, having taken ors ders as a priest, has been nominat-s ed rector of a parish in Transyl-s vania, draws attention to the fact s that a number of members of prins cely or reigning families have res nounced the world in order to fol-s low a religious vocation. The vis dow of the Duke of Braganza, who s was compelled to abdicate the s throne of Portugal, entered the s Solemes Community after his death s and now, with a younger sister, s spends her days in peaceful retires ment in a convent in the Isle of s Wight, where King Edward and s other members of the Royal Fams ily frequently visit her. Prince s Maximilian, a brother of the pres sent King of Saxony, as is well s known, after having exercised his s apostolate in the East end of Lons don, is now teaching canon law and s liturgy to young clerics in the Uns iversity of Freiburg. Prince Ferdi-s nand of Croy, who was a domestic s prelate to Leo XIII., is now a pas rish priest of Mores, while Princess s Henriette of Liechtenstein lives in s a Benedictine convent near Prague, s as Mother Adelgundis. There are s quite a number of aristocratic Ens glish ladies of title who have taken s the veil. Two sisters of the late s Lord Russell of Killowen are in the s Convent of the Holy Child at Mays field, and one of Lord Ashbourne's s daughters is also a member of the s same community. Lady Ethelreda
s Howard is head of the Mill Hill s Convent, while Lady Maria Chris-s tina Bandini, Lord Newburgh's s daughter, and Lady Leopold Keps pel, a sister of Lord Albermarle, s are members of the Sacre Coeur.
s No fewer than four aunts of the s Duchess of Norfolk are in convents.

WHILE THE GLOVE IS UP.

Then No Man Can Be Arrested in s This English Town.

The quaint custom of "proclaiming s the fair" at Honiton has just been s observed. The town obtained the s grant of a fair from the lord of the s manor so long ago as 1257, and the s fair still retains some of the pics turesque characteristics of bygone s days.

The town crier, dressed in pictur-
s esque uniform and carrying a pole s decorated with gay flowers and surs mounted by a large gilt model of a s glove hand, publicly announces the s opening of the fair as follows:
s "Oyez! Oyez! Oyez! The fair's bes gun, the glove is up. No man can s be arrested till the glove is taken s down." Hot coins are then thrown s among the children.

The pole and glove will remain s displayed until the end of the fair.

ALTERNATIVES.

He—"If a girl declines an offer s of marriage and becomes a spins ster, she is apt to regret it."

She—"Yes; and if she marries s she is apt to regret it—so what can s a poor girl do?"

His name was Hezekiah Doolittle
s and he was blessed with a sanguine s temperament. When he proposed s to Annie Warner she inquired what s means he had with which to sup-s port a wife. "None whatever," s said the cheerful Hezekiah, "but s poverty is no disgrace, and some s day I expect to strike it rich."

They were married and went to s live with Annie's parents "until s something turned up." Hezekiah s passed by the small jobs, looking s for something big, but he was als ways on hand for meals.

Annie fretted because they were s a burden on her parents and chid-s ed him for his inaction.

"Don't worry," said he. "It will s spoil your beauty."

Hezekiah lived up to his own s creed and refused to worry, no mats ter how great the provocation. Even s when Annie's parents turned s them out he was perfectly calm.
s "The Lord will provide," he ex-s claimed placidly, but his wife wast-s ed no time in talk. She rented a s small cottage, bought some furni-s ture on credit and took in washing.

"The debt on the furniture will s soon be due," she reminded him s one day.

"Never trouble trouble until s trouble troubles you," quoted Hes zekiah.

So his wife did plain sewing at s night to increase their scanty ins come. Then the baby was born and s Annie was unable to work. "What s shall we do?" she cried.

"Don't worry. It will injure s your health," soothed Hezekiah.
s "I am still expecting something to s turn up."

Annie's folks helped them for a s year and then she rented a larger s house and took in boarders.

"The rent will soon be due," she s told her husband as she glanced

"Take no thought for the mors row," reproved Hezekiah. "The s morrow will take thought for the s things of itself."

Annie worked harder. Her cares s increased as the family increased,
s and she lost her beauty, her health
s and her temper.

"You worry too much," remons strated her husband. "Why don't s you take a hopeful view of life, as s I do?"

Human endurance has its limits,
s and the end came at last. Annie s died of overwork, her parents took s the children and the hopeful Hes zekiah was left to shift for himself.

"The world owes me a living," s said he, so he took to the road. As s he tramped out of the village, past s the little country cemetery, his eyes s sought out the unsodded grave of s his wife and he sighed.

"The ways of Providence are ins scrutable," he murmured resigned-s ly. "She was a good wife, but she

LINKING THE RIVERS.

The British government in India
s is considering a project to link tos gether the rivers Indus, Jhelam, s Chenab, Beas, Ravi and Sutlej, in s order to equalize the flow of water s for irrigation purposes. Thus s when there is a flood in one of the s rivers a part of the water can be s diverted to a point where it may s be more needed. In this way it is s believed that the district of the s Punjab, a name which means the s Five Rivers, can be assured a suf-s ficient water-supply at all seasons.

It's easier to cultivate a girl's

THE BEST FLOUR. DAFOE'S NONESUCH DAFOE'S MANITOBA PATENT

By numerous tests by the best Bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best Flours in the market. When buying Flour ask for Dafoe's, and patronize your home mill, thereby producing Bran and Shorts that you can purchase cheaper than the product of the Western mills, which has to be transported thousands of miles at great expense, and usually, when it reaches you, of inferior quality.

The grocer complains if the farmer or the mechanic sends to Toronto or to outside points for an article he can get at the home store just as good, but he does not hesitate to buy Flour from mills hundreds of miles away, and sell you an inferior Flour for more money than you can purchase the home product for, every bag of which is guaranteed.

VINE—DONALDSON.

A very pretty house wedding occurred at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Vine on Wednesday of last week, when their daughter, Miss Helena Maud, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. J. Franklin Donaldson, of Peterboro', in the presence of about seventy-five relatives and friends of the contracting parties. At 8:30 p. m. to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by her cousin, Miss Ruby Sigsworth, of Hartington, the bride entered the room on her father's arm the ceremony being performed by the Rev. W. H. Emsley. The bride was becomingly attired in white lawn, as was also the bridesmaid, Miss Mabel Donaldson, sister of the groom. Mr. Stanley Embury, of Belleville, performed the duties of best man. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold bracelet set with pearls and garnets, to the bridesmaid a pearl brooch, and to the groomsmen a tie pin. The bride's travelling dress was a suit of brown. The happy couple left on the midnight train for Peterboro', where they will reside. The bride was the

A LOVE EPISODE.

When "CAPT. D'ARCY" on furlough was relieved, To "THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME" he a visit conceived He was "LONGING FOR HOME," his dear home, "NAPANEE." "IS MY SWEETHEART STILL TRUE TO ME?" soon I will see. For a stroll he went out, 'twas so nice, "IN THE GLOAMING." Met sweet "ANNIE LAURIE" so pensively roaming. "EVERY GIRL SHOULD HAVE A BEAU" she reflected, An old chum of "SCHOOL DAYS" was here, unexpected Why linger? "IT'S LONESOME TO-NIGHT!" said the spark. She replied, "I'M AFRAID TO COME HOME IN THE DARK." "THERE'S ONLY ONE SWEETHEART FOR ME" said he slyly. And "ARE YOU SINCERE" she then whispered so shyly. "OH! PROMISE ME" Jack you will always be true, He said, steady! "THE MOON HAS HIS EYES ON YOU." She longed for "SWEET KISSES," he fumed and he raged Said, the dear "MERRY WIDOW" and I am engaged. There are "NO WEDDING BELLS" for poor Annie this time, 'Twill be "SOME OTHER DAY" when you hear their sweet chime. —Chas. Fisher

Military Camp.

Any person desiring to go to camp with No. 4 Company, 47th Battalion, should leave their names with Sgt. A. Douglas or W. M. Maybee. The company leaves for camp on Monday, August 31st. The military grounds on Barriefield Heights are in splendid condition for the camp and at which 3500 troops are expected to be present. The new water supply is excellent and the drainage is greatly improved. The grounds are now in the best possible condition for a military camp.

Cruise of the Dolphin.

M. B. Mills arrived in harbour on his new yacht, "Dolphin" on Monday morning of last week, after having taken part in the Rudder Cup Race from Hamilton to Chaumont and the Regatta at the latter place. He raced her down the lake and crossed the line in the twelfth place four following after. Good weather prevailed all the time with the exception of one night when a thunderstorm met them off Cobourg. The Dolphin close reefed made easy work of it and proved herself to be good in any weather, but not quite fast enough to compete with the up-to-date racers. The Regatta at Chaumont was a great success and all speak highly of the Watertown Crescent Club. Mr. Wm. Harrison, of Hooper's, and his friend Dr. Ross Thomas, of London, Ont., made the run down the lake aboard the Dolphin.

Yes.

We want you to come and see us and bring along your cash, and we think we can show you that you can save money by buying from us. We are offering a big discount off all lines of crockery and glassware in order to reduce our stock, which is far too large for this season of the year. You will find as good value with us in all lines of groceries etc., as any where in town. Our tea at 25c. has them all whipped in the cup. Will pay highest price for eggs

Numerous Accidents.

Last week Mr. E. Ming, Veterinary Surgeon, attended a remarkable series of accidents to horses, having one every day of the week. On Saturday Mr. M. Farrell, Lonsdale, had a horse wounded by a stick running into its hip and flank. A piece of the stick was removed from the horses flank 22 inches from where it entered the horses leg. On Monday Mr. Wm. Reid, Camden, had a horse gored by a bull in the lung cavity breaking a rib necessitating the wiring of the rib to gether, and on Monday evening Mr. Reid had another horse gored by the same bull making a wound 14 inches long exposing about six inches of the bowel. On Wednesday Mr. Scouton, of Thorpe, while threshing for a neighbor drove to close to the cleaner and while switching flies the horse caught its tail between the drive belt and cylinder pulley, tearing the tail out in such a manner as to expose the whole interior organs of the animal. On Thursday Mr. Frank Hart had a colt injured almost severing one of its fore legs from its body. On Friday Mr. Chas. Hawley had a colt badly gored by a bull necessitating its destruction.

Sunny Jim Again.

Jim Dumps was once a wretched man
Try as he would, he could not plan.
To make what money was allowed
Buy school books for his lousy crowd.
“What shall I do?” the poor man calls
Why go and buy your books at Paul’s
Your money will go round with him,
He did and now he’s Sunny Jim.

The Tax Rate.

At the last meeting of the Town Council, Councillor Osborne called attention to the fact that in striking the estimates the chairman of the finance committee had placed the amount appropriated for interest $2,500 to high.
Estimates were also made for a full year’s school taxes instead of for five months as the rest of the appropriations were made. If these two items were made for five months instead of a year the tax rate for the five months could be reduced from 27 mills to 20
mills for the five months ending Jan.
1909. Some of the Councillors were of the opinion that the rate should be left at 27 mills in order to provide money for the incoming council to expend until the new taxes should come in. Many are the complaints about paying 27 mills taxes for five months, especially in view of the largely increased assessment.

THAT AWFUL DEPRESSION

Which Mrs. Grenery experienced is but the story that thousands could tell of their sufferings from Dyspepsia. Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets is the Panacea.

"I have proved Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets to be the only effective remedy for my dyspepsia. I have used most everything I could hear of, but these tablets 'touch the spot' and take away the awful depression and distress in almost quicker time than it takes to tell it. You may publish this that all sufferers from Indigestion and Dyspepsia may find the relief I did. Mrs. M. Grenery, 51 Alice St., Toronto. Sixty tablets, 35 cents. (7)
